EXPECT HERESY TRIAL

Bishop of Birmingham's Reply to Archbishop of Canterbury Eagerly Awaited.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Great Britain soon may have its first heresy trial since 1717.

Whether the trial will be held, as demanded by certain sections of the clergy, may hinge upon the reply to be made Sunday by the archbishop of Canterbury to a letter from E. W. Barnes, bishop of Birmingham.

In his letter Barnes reaffirmed that the doctrine of transsubstantiation was untrue. He added, "No man shall drive me to Tennessee or Rome."

Not even the recent dispute over prayerbooks has aroused half the bitterness and partisanship called up by Barnes' denunciation, wherein he said: "Darwin's triumph has destroyed the whole theological scheme."

Barnes' references to "erroneous sacramental doctrines" particularly antagonized Rev. Bullock Webster and led him to make his attack last Sunday on Barnes in St. Paul's cathedral.

LAST INTERVIEW WITH COL. MILLER

Newspaper Woman Went Over 101 Ranch Show With "Big Joe" Last Monday—Now He Is Dead.

Following is the story of the last stand of Col. Joe Miller with his own 101 ranch Wild West show, as told by Louise Beard, the last person to gain audience in a press interview with the late inimitable cowman-showman. It reveals the character of the big, boyish colonel in his true setting.

By Louise Beard.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okl., Oct. 22.—The big gentleman who showed me over the 101 ranch Wild West show lot last Monday is dead.

Col. Joe Miller's booming laugh will never again echo in the "big tops" he loved.

It was on the last day of the circus season that the show played Oklahoma City.

Someone directed me to the main ticket wagon. I went in.

There was big Joe Miller, shaking my hand, and saying, "Bless your heart, child, I'll show you all over the place, you bet I will."

So began the last newspaper tour of the 101 ranch Wild West show with Colonel Joe.

"My little wife's about your size and age, I reckon," he told me.

"Did you know I had a four months' old son? Yes, ma'am, and he and his mother will be home before long. They've been up north, visitin' her folks."

His diamond studded elk tooth badge sparkled in the sun. I commented on the diamonds and counted stones.

"I never stopped to count 'em," he laughed.

Then, boyishly, 'these big yeller ones"—showing the diamonds on his tie and in his ring—"are supposed to be 10 karats apiece."

As we moved thru the tents everyone had a glad greeting for the big colonel who owned the show, and I suspect, had a lease on their hearts as well. Every horse got a pat from him as we passed.

"Guess you never saw my saddle," he ventured, "it's got 246 diamonds in it besides some rubies and other stones." A helper opened the strong box where the saddle was kept. He lifted it from flannel wrappings. I managed a gasp.

"How did you ever happen to have it made?"

"Well, I went to Paris and saw Napoleon's saddle in a museum. So I jest decided to outdo him and I reckon I did," Joe smiled.

Proudly he showed me over the kitchen and eating tents.

"I'm invitin' you to come and have dinner with us. I reckon we could squeeze in a little girl like you." He waved his hand at the stretches of tables set for lunch.

Knew "Little Joe."

I had told him I knew his son, "Little Joe" Miller, at the University of Oklahoma.

"Pshaw—Joe's with the show but he's not down this morning yet. Why, that kid's assistant manager of the show, did you know that?"

Again that booming laugh made the diamond studded elk tooth badge sparkle in the sun.

Before I left we went back to the ticket stand. He handed me a little booklet.

I had no desire to end my interview with such a rancher, globe trotter and circus manager.

"Oh, say, Colonel Joe, you didn't show me the monkeys."

"Why, so I didn't," and he climbed down the rickety ticket wagon steps. "You ought to see the little rascals."

On our way to the monkey cage a shabby, middle aged man stopped the colonel.

"Colonel Joe, ain't you?"

"Yeah, I reckon I am," Miller drawled, smiling.

"Why, I was awondering if you had a piece land up there I could rent. I shore need a place to go."

"You have a family, I reckon," Colonel Joe said. "Well, sir, I'm afraid we're getting short on houses for tenants up there. You write or go up to the ranch and if there's anything they'll let you know right away."

"Wish we had all the land in the country to fix up fellows like that," the colonel remarked to me.

And that's the memory I will keep of him.

Ban Johnson Taking Complete Rest Cure

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—When Ban B. Johnson rests—he rests.

After more than a quarter of a century as president of the American league, Johnson is recuperating from his labors.

For the past week he has done nothing but rest at this place, one of the most famous in the middle west.

The stormy petrel of baseball, tired and worn, would have naught to do with men who tried to call on him yesterday. Johnson was resting. His nurse said so, and guarded jealously the entrance to his quarters.

Johnson is not permitted to see anyone besides his nurse and the secretary who reads his mail. He has not left his room in his hotel since he arrived here last Tuesday.

The former head of the junior loop in the baseball world resigned as president of the league several months ago, but his resignation did not become effective until little more than a week ago.

TRANS-ATLANTIC PLANE RETURNS

Second Attempt of "Dawn" to Get Away Fails.

TO TRY AGAIN ON SUNDAY

Mrs. Grayson and Companions Gone From Old Orchard Seventeen Minutes Before Return.

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Undaunted by a second false start, Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson prepared today to make a new attempt tomorrow morning to get away on her proposed flight to Copenhagen.

Just seventeen minutes after she and two companions took off from the beach here this morning, in the Amphibian plane "The Dawn" they were forced to land in the water 100 yards off shore. The giant plane, slightly overloaded, had been unable to get altitude in the face of stiff headwinds.

"We could be ready for a fresh start this afternoon" the real estate woman declared as she alighted from the plane, "but we're anxious to take off at the beginning of the day and hence decided to postpone the start until tomorrow."

Mrs. Grayson said today's attempt had confirmed her belief that the plane was too heavily loaded for an extended flight.

The load will be lightened by about 300 pounds before any new attempt is made, she said.

Today's false start was the second made by the fliers of "The Dawn." They were forced back Monday when the plane proved nose-heavy.

On the first attempt to take-off, the plane ran about two miles down the beach and was unable to rise.

Then when the take-off was finally made at 6:16 a. m., the plane skimmed along about twenty-five or fifty feet above the water and finally circled towards Castro bay.

A few minutes later, watchers saw the plane again coming toward Old Orchard and as it was about 100 yards from the shore it suddenly nosed towards the water and landed.

At 6:50 a. m., the plane was taxied in from the water and brought onto the beach.

Preparations for the flight this morning were made without great excitement.

Overnight, Mrs. Grayson and Wilmer Stultz, her pilot, announced that if possible the take-off would be made today. Mechanics tinkered with the plane and announced it was in readiness.

Stultz and Brice Goldsborough,

FREDERICK DANIEL KEES.

Mr. Kees died Thursday at the age of seventy-six and will be buried Sunday afternoon in Beatrice. He was one of the best known manufacturers in this section, and was prominent in civic affairs.

KEES FUNERAL IS SET FOR SUNDAY

Well Known Beatrice Manufacturer Who Died at Seventy-six Is to Be Buried at Beatrice.

BEATRICE, Neb., Oct. 22.—Funeral services for Frederick Daniel Kees, who died here Thursday at the age of seventy-six, will be held at 3 o'clock Sunday from the Harmon-Johnson funeral home and burial will be in Evergreen Park cemetery.

Mr. Kees was born Apr. 9, 1851, at Geinhausem, Hessen, German, the youngest son of John J. and Ernstine Freund Kees. After receiving a common school education he learned the locksmith's trade, and at the age of eighteen came to America. After a few years in Newark, N. J., and Reading, Pa., he came to Beatrice in 1874 and opened a gunsmith shop. In 1880 he engaged in the retail hardware business in the building on North Fifth street now occupied by the Baker-Hartzell company. In 1884 he built the building now occupied by Davidson dairy, and moved his business into it.

In 1892 he commenced to manufacture hook corn huskers. These were an innovation then. Mr. Kees devoted much time and effort to teaching farmers this new and easier way to gather corn. In 1904 Mr. Kees disposed of his retail hardware business, devoting all of his attention to the F. D. Kees Manufacturing company of which he was president.

He took a keen interest in civic affairs. He served on the city council several terms and was a trustee and officer of the Beatrice creamery association for many years. During the construction of the Barneston dam he was a director and treasurer of the Beatrice Power company. While engaged in the retail hardware business he took an active part in the state retail hardware association and was a president of that association.

On May 6, 1880, at Nebraska City he married Emma Zimmerer. He built his home at 924 Elk street where they have resided ever since. He is survived by Mrs. Kees, three children, Clara, Daniel and John A. Kees; three grandchildren, Barbara, Thomas Daniel and Weldon, all of Beatrice; his brother, J. G. Kees, of Nebraska City, and nieces and nephews in this country and in Germany.

During the summer his health began to fail. In August he went to Excelsior Springs in the hope of securing relief. He returned home on Sept. 19 and from then on failed rapidly until the end.

WILHELM OPENS UP PARK

Will Share It With Public—First Step in Move to Break Seclusion.

DOORN, Holland, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Kaiser Wilhelm has given his first indication of an attempt at re-approaching his fellowmen, by establishing "Rosary park" for the public.

"Gezichtslaan," as the park is called in German, is included in the kaiser's castle grounds and fronts the castle.

This is the first time the kaiser has shown willingness to break his seclusion by permitting the public to use some of his ground.

His policy was to keep strangers on the public roads, and at a distance from his castle.

ARGUE MOTION IN THE SHARP CASE

Judge Shepherd Takes Matter Under Advisement While Reading up on Citations by the Attorneys.

Motion for a new trial for Frank Sharp, convicted of killing his wife Harriet Sharp on March 16, 1926 was argued before Judge Shepherd of the district court Saturday morning and was taken under advisement by the court pending the reading of certain cases cited by attorneys for both the state and the defense. Judge Shepherd said that while he felt inclined to dispose of the motion at once he wished to go over these cases.

Before beginning argument on the motion, Attorney Max Beghtol for the defense, put into the record a statement denying rumors that one of the jurors in the Sharp trial was mentally incompetent and had been treated in a state institution. He said he had received communications anonymous and otherwise stating this as a fact but that his investigation and that of the county attorney showed the rumor had no basis.

The motion for a new trial for Sharp was based by the defense on three propositions: The challenging of jurors on the grounds alone that they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment and still not have such scruples as would prevent him from finding a man guilty if the death penalty was to be inflicted. He cited one juror in the Sharp case whom he said had stated that he had conscientious scruples but had voted the death penalty. He had stated that he would do his duty.

Attorney Beghtol said he could find no cases where conscientious scruples alone had been used as a reason for challenge. About forty men were discharged in the Sharp case, he stated, and ten or twelve of these had been discharged on conscientious scruples alone. Others the court had questioned further.

The defense contended that it should have been permitted to question Expert Carmody upon standard finger print books which it was not permitted to do and to question him on statements of other experts. The defense should have been permitted, he contended ,to examine Carmody on a statement made and

NO SQUABBLE WITH MAYOR

Former Commissioner Cowgill to Appear Before Committee If Given Chance.

Former Commissioner Cowgill issued a statement Saturday to the effect that in his open letter addressed to Mayor Hedge, he intended nothing in way of criticism toward the executive.

"There are two things I should like to make clear," he said, "one is that there is no squabble between Mayor Hedge and myself. The other is that I would stress the idea that the committee which investigates the financial needs of the city, direct its attention to economy in government and to careful and thoro consideration of a form of government that will induce economy."

Asked whether or not he will appear before the committee, Mr. Cowgill said:

"I certainly shall be glad to do so if the opportunity is given."

ANTI-AMERICAN MOVE SPREADING

State Department Asks Report From Officials in Northern Nicaragua on Rebellious Activities.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—The rpeorted spread of anti-American rebellion in northern Nicaragua, the region under United States marine occupation, caused the state department today to ask for a special report from its officials there.

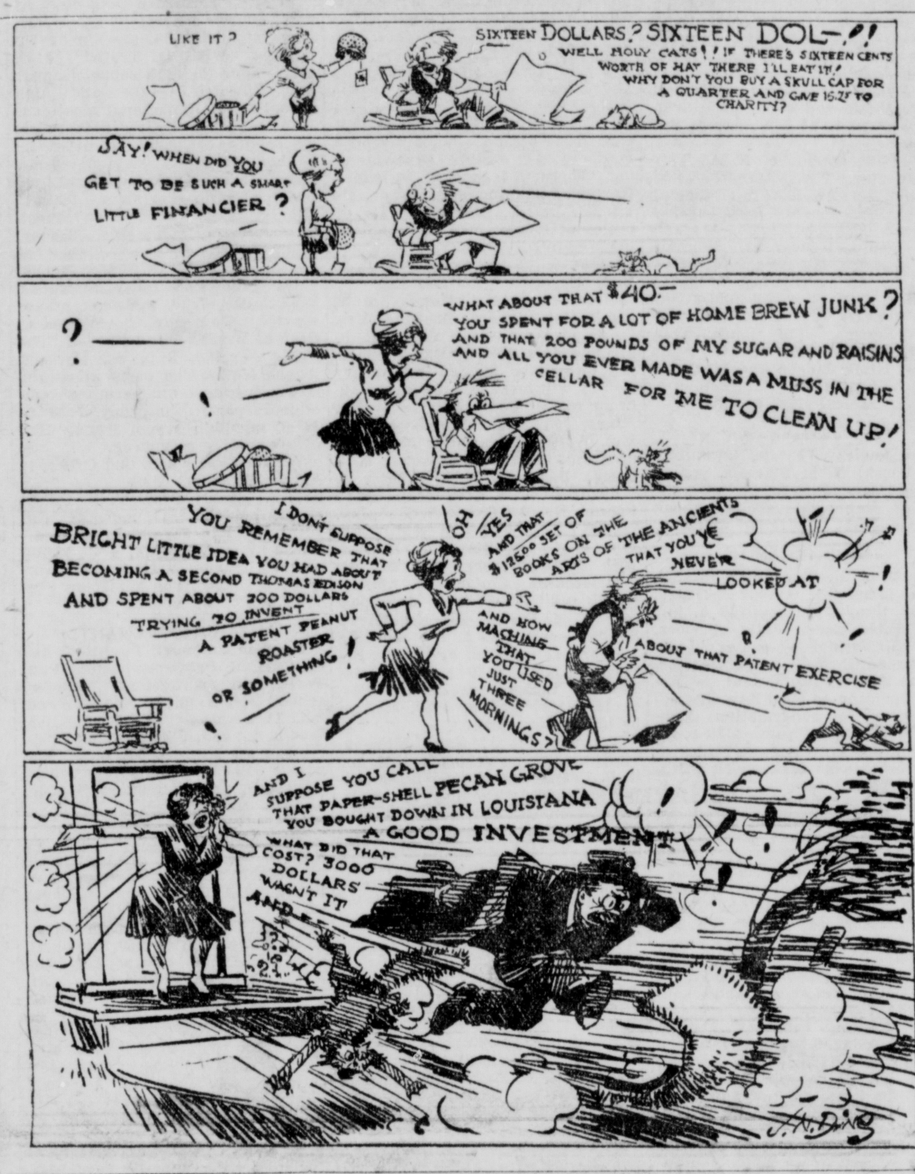

Replying to editorial attacks against administration policy and concerning the larger number of Nicaraguan rebels killed by American marines, Secretary Kellogg said today:

"I do not think there have been any men killed in Nicaragua by the constabulary or by the United States marines, who were not outlawed bandits."

Nicaraguan revolutionists who refused to lay down their arms and accept the American settlement arranged by Col. Henry L. Stimson on May 15, were declared outlaws. Stimson at that time reported "the civil war is now definitely ended," adding that the only remaining rebels were about 150 under the liberal General Sandino.

Since May 15 official American dispatches have reported 540 "outlaws" killed and more than 165 wounded by the marines and marine officered constabulary, compared with five marines killed, one wounded and four constabulary killed. These official dispatches stated that in the ten major engagements in northern Nicaragua the "outlows" had removed uncounted dead, indicating the casualty list is higher than 700.

HURRYING ALONG WITH STRUCTURE

PUBLIC SAFETY HEAD INSPECTS OLD BUILDING.

Windows of Fire Station Fall Out When Vibration and Breeze Shake Building—More Plans Monday.

Assuming that fire station No. 2, Twenty-third and O, cannot stand much longer, Commissioner Baer, head of public safety, is urging haste in replacement. The department head together with Fire Chief Hansen visited the shack Saturday morning. They looked with concern upon the crumbling northwest corner and saw openings where windows had been, the glass shaken out from vibration caused by traffic and breeze.

City Engineer Erickson hopes Monday to present plans and cost estimate on plumbing, heating and wiring. The council a week ago approved plans and $21,000 cost estimate on the replacement structure alone and also approved a balnket estimate of not more than $5,000 on plumbing, wiring, heating and equipment. Bids on the structure will be opened next Saturday and on the other items one week later.

Commissioner Bair is angling for a best offer for salvage on the delapidated old building but is not meeting with great success.

COLORADO CHIEF IS ASKED FOR HELP

Coal Strike Situation in Southern Fields Beyond Local Authorities.

GUARDS STOP PICKETS

Ninety-three Picketers in Jail at Walsenburg and Trinidad.

MORE ARRESTED EXPECTED

National Organizer for I. W. W. Declares Picketing Will Continue With 5,000 More Members Free.

WALSENBURG, Col., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Armed guards stopped I. W. W. pickets today as they approached the Ideal mine, regarded as the stronghold of the coal operators.

Fifty-two pickets, sixteen of whom were women, were arrested and brought to district court here.

The mine, owned by the Colorado Iron & Fuel company, was operating with its regular force of men today, despite the threat of the I. W. W., to close it within two days after their leaders had called the strike.

Dave Christenson, superintendent of the Ideal mine, had personal charge of the guards, nine of whom were mounted.

One of the women attempted to push past the guards. She was surrounded by the mounted guards and forced back with the remainder of the pickets.

Altho hot words were tossed about between the guards and the I. W. W. members, there was no trouble.

The pickets were led by John Alvilar, substituting for Paul Seidler, publicity man of the I. W. W., who was arrested near Trinidad yesterday and placed in jail on a charge of picketing. The problem of incarceration of the pickets again troubled authorities here today. Forty seven were in jail following yesterday's roundup. Those arrested today were held in the courtroom pending some agreement on where they should be taken.

Kristen Svanum of Butte, Mont., national organizer, was not discouraged after today's arrests.

"We will continue to picket the mines. There are 5,000 more I. W. W., members in Colorado who will have to be arrested before picketing stops," he said.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 22—(U.P.)—With the strike situation in the southern coal field admittedly beyond control of local authorities, an appeal was to be made today to Governor Adams for state aid.

Robert E. Foote, Huerfano county attorney, and state industrial commissioners Thomas Annear and George M. Taylor were scheduled for a conference with the governor at 10 a. m. to ask state action.

Ninety-three picketers are in jail at Walsenburg and Trinidad and further arrests were expected today with I. W. W., leaders announcing the picketing would continue. Seven women who were arrested for picketing yesterday weer later released.

Picketers brought out an additional 200 miners in the Walsenburg field yesterday.

In the northern field, where mines closed down until the southern strike is settled, the situation remained quiet.

SAY VERDICT JUSTIFIED

Attorneys for Moreland Estate Insist $33,000 Too Small a Judgment.

A brief of numerous pages was filed with the supreme court Saturday by attorneys for the representative of the estate of Hubert Moreland, Lincoln insurance man, killed by a fast running passenger train of the Northwestern railroad at a crossing in the village of Crookston, in which they say that not only was the verdict of $33,000 amply supported, but that a judgment for $75,000 would not have been too large considering the earning ability of the decedent.

The brief discusses the evidence to show that Moreland and his companion were not negligent in their conduct, but that the company was guilty of gross negligence in operating a fast train thru the village without giving any warning of its approach, and at a time when the presence of a freight train and a locomotive with steam up on a side track enchained the attention of the driver and his companion.

It is charged that it is negligence for a company to run a train thru a village in violation of the ordinance, and urged that the occupants of the automobile had a right to assume that the trains would be operated in accordance with law.

TRUCK AND CAR COLLIDES.

A truck driven by M. D. Morgan, 2141 North Twenty-ninth street, and a car driven by Mrs. R. J. Black, route 2, Lincoln, collided at the intersection of Tenth and Q streets at 11:45 a. m., Saturday. The passenger car was damaged slightly. No one was injured.

ELEVATED TRAINS CRASH

Two New York Interborough Rapid Transits Collide, With Twenty-five Hurt.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(UP) — Two Interborough Rapid Transit trains on the elevated at Two Hundred and Seventh street and Broadway, crashed in a rear end collision today during a period of peak traffic.

Twenty-five persons received first aid treatment for injuries and two were severely hurt.

Those seriously hurt were Martha Chewen, injured internally, and Matthew Ryan, motorman.

Utmost confusion followed the collision. Both trains were crowded. Women screamed and men joined in a mad scramble to free themselves from the train.

Police reserves restored order.

DESIRE CHANGES IN BUS SERVICE

Cornhusker Line Plans Thru Service Between Kansas City and Denver by Way of Lincoln.

The Cornhusker Stage Lines filed a petition with the state railway commission Saturday asking for the cancellation of a number of schedules of bus operations, to revise others and add new service. O. W. Townsend is the owner. He proposes to establish a stage line giving service from Kansas City to Denver by way of Nebraska City, Lincoln, Hastings, Grand Island, Kearney, North Platte and Fort Morgan, a morning and afternoon bus starting daily from each terminal. The schedule is appended to the application.

Mr. Townsend says that this will be a thru line in part, with schedules so fitted in that the service does not interfere with the intrastate service of the Interstate company of Omaha or the Lincoln-Nebraska City Coach line.

The company wants to establish a line between Grand Island and Kearney, and to rearrange the service between Fremont, Columbus and Grand Island and between Norfolk, Columbus and Lincoln so that there is no duplication of either railroad or bus line service. It desires to abandon temporarily service between Holdrege and McCook, for the reason that the road between Atlanta and Arapahoe is under construction, and the detours go over bad hills and dirt roads almost impassable in rainy weather.

Permission is asked to abandon service between Grand Island and Broken Bow because it is unprofitable, and the people are served by the Pop Corn Trail bus from Ord. Authority to cancel service between Grand Island and North Platte and the Colorado line on the schedules now in force is also asked because these towns will be served by the new thru line.

MORE CASH FOOD BUYING.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—"Americans are entitled to at least one billion dollars more of installment credit than they are now using," declares William G. Shepherd in Collier's Weekly, "and this vast credit for installment buying comes out of the American food basket. Cash buying of food is increasing tremendously," he says. "Chain stores have helped to spread the habit of paying cash for food. Employers pay wages more frequently so that cash flows to American homes oftener than in other days. The old 'grocery book' and the old 'meat book' which we used to carry to stores for credit have disappeared'."

COL. JOE MILLER VICTIM OF FUMES

Eldest of Noted Miller Brothers of 101 Ranch at Ponca City, Okla., Found Dead in Garage.

PONCA CITY, Okla., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Col. Joe Miller, born to the saddle of the old west to perepetuate it as showman and ranch baron, has passed with his time.

Apparently the victim of fumes from his automobiles, the colonel, eldest of the noted Miller brothers of 101 Ranch here, was found dead in the Ranch garage late yesterday. The motor of the car was still running when his body was found.

Funeral plans today waited the return of his widow and young son son from Grand Rapids, Mich., where they had been visiting relatives. The body rests in a local mortuary while old cowmen, indians and the public mourn the passing of another pioneer.

The colonel's death robs the only "wild west show" of a familiar figure to thousands on circus audiences. He had returned only recently to the ranch with the circus which bears its name. Colonel Joe took an active part in his show, leading his "punchers" and Indian troupers into the arena.

He was the eldest of three brothers, and is survived by the other two, George and Zack. Aside from his actiivties as a showman, the colonel was known as the "Luther Burbank" of the ranch. He directed the gorwing of 350 varieties of fruit on the Miller holidngs.

He was born in Kentucky and raised in this section, a real cown man who turned showman when the Cayuse and Corrall became an oddity to the world.

Besides his family and brothers, the colonel is survived by a sister, Mrs. William England of Ponca City.

Colonel Joe, married twice, is also survived by two other sons, George W. Miller and Joseph Miller, Jr., and his former wife, Mrs. Alice Miller Hartz, all of Ponca City.

Colonel Miller was fifty-eight years old. He came to indian territory with his parents from old Kentucky in 1871 when only two years old.

Your Problems
BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: I have been rather amused by the serious discussion of the "broken life line," and that any one in this enlightened age should really believe in it. I thought we all knew that it is but superstition—an amusing pastime, perhaps, but never to be taken seriously.

I used to dabble in palmistry myself when I was young—in the teens and early twenties—and it was amusing—and entertaining, but of course we never considered it as anything but a pastime—as any fortune telling games that young people enjoy.

My palm lines showed that I would live to be a little over thirty—at the very longest stretch possibly forty-five, and that over thirty my health would be very poor. Well, I am over fifty, and no sign of dying yet, and my health is better now than it was at thirty!

So if I had a broken life line I should not worry! Because someone who died young happened to have a broken life line, it does not mean that everyone who has a broken life line will die young! Examine a number of old folks' palms, and see how many have broken life lines! —The Snap Dragon.

A. Much obliged for backing me in my contention that lines on the hand are mere happenstance and have nothing to do with one's tenure on life.

The young lady who wrote was no doubt young and in love with living. Any prospect of its being cut off prematurely worried her. Since the letters of "Fair Play" and yourself have appeared, she should be able to smile at her fears and prepare for a long and useful life.

Dear Mary: Is it possible to put ripe tomatoes away for the winter? I should be very glad to learn of a way, if there is one.—Housekeeper.

A. It is said that ripe and perfectly sound tomatoes may be kept for winter use by packing them carefully in large stone jars and pouring over them a very strong brine. Cover tightly to keep out the air. A weight is not necessary. Put a plate on them to keep them under the brine. When wanted for use, take out the required number of tomatoes and soak them twenty-four hours in cold water; they can then be peeled and sliced and will taste as tho they had just come from the vine.

Dear Mary Gordon: I am a boy in my early teens and I am unhappy.

I was keeping company with a girl my age. About two months ago she was out of town. When she returned she acted like she did not want my company and never speaks to me.

Her grandfather ordered me away from her home. She has written to my friend telling him she has no reason to be mad. Please give me some advice. Your truly—V. C. E.

A. Her grandfather probably told her to act as she does. And can you blame her, if she lives with him and is dependent on him for her home? Besides, boys and girls in their early teens should be good pals, but not mushy lovers. If I had my way they would not begin "keeping company" until seventeen or eighteen, at least. Friends, comrades, pals, yes, but in groups always, not in twos.

Mock Duck.

Buy as many pork chops as are needed for your family and have the butcher cut them quite thick, about an inch or an inch and a half, and make an incision on the side of each chop with his knife. The incision is made so that the opening is small, but the slit inside the chop is larger. Fill each chop with stuffing made of three-fourths cup bread crumbs, two tablespoons lemon juice, one-half onion, three-fourths teaspoon celery salt, one-third teaspoon pepper. Pin the opening of the chop shut with tooth picks after stuffing. Dredge with flour and then brown in hot fat. After browning, sprinkle salt over the chops and pour one and one-half cups of boiling water over them. Cover and bake in the oven for about three hours.

WORK'S POINTERS ON AUCTION BRIDGE

Milton C. Work, the international authority, will answer your auction bridge questions. A stamped, self-addressed envelope must accompany each request for replies.

This week we considered the question of original leads, giving a hand each day and asking what should be led from it against three different declarations.

Yesterday's Hand.

S.: A-Q-3
H.: 5-4-3-2
D.: A-8-5
C.: Q-10-3

It is held by West, South (Dealer) having obtained the contract in each case by his first bid. His three bids were: No. 13, one No Trump; No. 14, one Heart; No. 15, three Hearts.

The card which should be led from the above hand in each one of the above cases is:

No. 13 No. 14 No. 15

No. 13. No question as to the lead against a No Trump. Any four-card suit, no matter how weak, is more advisable than any three-carder.

No. 14. No desirable lead and therefore a guess as to which is the least undesirable. The Ace of Spades has the advantage of being practically sure of winning a trick and giving the leader a look at Dummy before he leads to trick 2. Whether he will continue the Spades depends upon what the Ace brings forth. With an encouraging card from the partner (i. e., the apparent starting of a signal), the Spade should be continued, but without it, a shift may be advisable especially if the King is not in the Dummy. If the King is in the Dummy, leading the small Spade to trick 2 will be practically sure to induce the Declarer to play the King because he will not place the original lead as having been made from Ace-Queen. With only small Spades in Dummy and with no request from the partner to continue, a shift can be made to whichever suit Dummy indicates as being the more advisable.

No. 15. With an initial declaration of three Hearts and with four Hearts in the leading hand, there is practically no chance that leading a trump will kill any high trump in partner's hand and it relieves West from choosing among three disadvantageous leads.

The body of Charles McCawley, who died from the self inflicted wounds a few hours after the tragedy, was taken from the hospital in York to the home of his brother, John, near Tamora. His death came just as the coroner's inquest was finding him guilty for the death of his estranged wife.

CREIGHTON UNI IN HUGE HOMECOMING

Grads From All Over at Fiftieth Anniversary — Thomas Says Nebraska Dry Enforcement Best.

OMAHA, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—The stage was set today for the greatest celebration in the history of Creighton university. Thousands of old grads are here from all parts of the world to participate in the fiftieth anniversary of the institution founded by the late Count John A. Creighton.

John E. Kennebeck, Sidney, Australia, journeyed here for the occasion, the trip taking seventeen days. He was accompanied by his family.

The Marquette university football team, which does battle with the Creighton eleven this afternoon arrived from Milwaukee Friday and limbering up for the contest, which is the "big" game on the schedule of each school.

J. Harry Furey of New York city, vice president of the United rPess and a member of the class of 1898, will be principal speaker at the Creighton alumni banquet tonight at Knights of Columbus' club. A thousand alumni association members have made reservations for the banquet.

Other speakers include Father Grace, president of Creighton university; City Commissioner John Hopkins; Joe Leary, captain of the Marquette football team and Joe Dendinger, captain of the Creighton eleven.

Parking Pest Champion

H. S. Arnstein in police court Friday laid claim to the "parking pest" champion. Arnstein, a clothing merchant, admitted his car had been "tagged" eighty times in the last year for violating traffic laws. He succeeded in "fixing" seventy-nine of these cases before they reached police court. He was fined $15 for the eightieth offense.

Boy's Death Accident

A coroners' jury late Friday decided that death of William Klauth, thirteen, was due to an unavoidable accident. The boy was killed when a machine driven by his mother struck a car driven by R. Slovak. The inquest exonerated Slovak from blame. Slovak said Mrs. Klauth's car struck his rear fender while he was crossing an intersection. Mrs. Klauth was driving the boy to school at the time.

Dry Laws Enforced

Elmer E. Thomas, federal prohibition director for Nebraska assured members of the state W. C. T. U., that dry laws are being enforced in Nebraska better than in any state at the union's annual banquet here.

Thomas declared that when politicians say that liquor will not be an issue in the 1928 campaign they are "spreading propaganda for their own selfish interests."

"Liquor law enforcement is the paramount question," Thomas said. "It is the most important issue before the eyes of the Ameircan people in my judgment."

HISTORIAN SUES LAWYER

Muzzey Wants $100,000 for Fight Chicago Mayor Made on Book and Propaganda.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—efforts to oust the British lion from public schools here and elsewhere today had developed four new angles.

John J. Gorman, the mayor's attorney, leading the fight to oust William McAndrews, on trial for insubordination and sponsoring British propaganda, as superintendent of schools, was faced with a $100,000 damage suit, filed by David Saville Muzzey. It was one of Muzzy's histories which drew the fire of the mayor.

Attorneys for McAndrews attacked Thompson for his endeavors, asserting the mayor is making Chicago "the laughing stock of the world."

U. J. Herrmann, appointed by Thompson to inspect the libraries here for pro-British matter, declared that any histories found containing such tendencies would be burned by the public hangman.

Mayor Thompson warned McAndrews that if he were banned from here, no other city would want him.

LAYS BLAME ON MOTHERS

Blanche Bates Creel Holds Them Responsible for Waywardness and Delinquency.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—The waywardness and delinquency prevalent among modern youth cannot be blamed on youth itself, but on mothers who "are abdicating their maternal authority and evading maternal responsibility," according to Mrs. George Creel, who, as Blanche Bates, was a leading star of the American stage a generation ago.

Mrs. Creel, who a few months ago publicly called for a "counter-revolt of parents" against the so-called revolt of youth, says in Century that she has since received a flood of letters from mothers discussing the problem.

"Every one of the letters was virtually an abdication of maternal authority," she declares. "Not in a single one was there a note of conscientious, courageous motherhood; only whimpers, futile handwritings and helpless bewilderment.

"hTe three phrases that stood out most prominently were these: 'It's so hard to keep saying 'No'; 'After all, a girl is only young once,' and 'I want my daughter to be happy.' All stressed these hackneyed excuses as tho they contained a definite justification for their failures. Not one apparently realized that the seeming extensions were actually indictments."

The modern girl, maintains Mrs. Creel, "is in no sense of the word a new creation or a miracle of self-development. To prove the absurdity of that crazy theory, all that any mother has to do is to recall her own childhood."

Mrs. Creel's own children, a girl thirteen, and a boy eleven, both are in bed nightly by 8:30.

"Doubtless many will accuse me of being old-fashioned and I am," she concludes. "I am not a modern mother, nor do I want to be."

LAW BREAKING POPULAR

Senator Reed Tells Physicians About 2,000,000 People Violate Dry Act.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Approximately 2,00,00 people in the United States are violating the liquor law, Senator James A. Reed, senior Missouri senator, told physicians attending the final banquet of the postgraduate medical association meetings here.

"If you will have a law obeyed" the senator said, "first have it respected and not force the public to pull down the shades and plug up the keyholes of their homes and admonish their children not to tell anyone they are violating the prohibition law. You cannot enforce laws held in contempt and some resolution must be found to meet his condition."

At an election held late yesterday afternoon, Dr. Lewellysf Barker, professor of medicine at John's Hopkins was made president, succeeding Dr. Carl L. Larsen of St. Paul. Dr. John B. Beaver, professor of surgery at University of Pennsylvania was made president-elect.

NORRIS IS NOT TO NAME DELEGATION

SORENSEN SAYS SLATE IS NOT CONTEMPLATED.

Hopes Big Endorsement for Norris for President Will Make Nebraska Political Factor in Convention.

The Norris-for-president forces in Nebraska are not making a fight on Lowden nor will they put up a slate in the form of pledged candidates for delegates to the national republican convention, according to C. A. Sorensen, head of the favorite son program in this state.

"Petitions to place Norris on the primary ballot as a preferential candidate for president are being obtained," said Mr. Sorensen Friday. "There is no haste about filing them, but they will be filed in due time. We do not intend to name a slate in the form of a list of candidates for delegates. We want a big vote for Norris for president and expect to get it. Any delegation named, if they are honorable men, and we assume they will be, will feel bound to vote for Norris in the national convention. Of course if there should be any enemies of Norris among the candidates on the ballot we would feel bound to tell the voters about it, but we do not care to stir up a fight about who shall be candidates and who shall not.

"We are not making a fight on Lowden, but we do not think Lowden supporters should place his name on the Nebraska primary ballot. If he should be defeated on the ballot it would be bad for him, and if he stays off the ballot he surely would be in a better position to fall heir to the Norris strength when it apears that Norris cannot be nominated."

Mr. Sorensen made it plain that Norris is not a candidate for president, but that he appreciates it a compliment to be proposed as a candidate. Mr. Sorensen did not say just how far he expected a Nebraska delegation to go if Norris is the choice of a large majority of republicans in Nebraska, but he said his endorsement would give the state delegation considerable influence in a convention in the choice of president.

In his argument in support of Norris' candidacy, Mr. Sorensen stated that the honor of an endorsement by republicans at the primary in his opinion, is due for the work he has done during his life time in public life and the punishment he has taken for his work, that his candidacy would afford a rallying point for the party and enable it to draw independents and retain voters who would drift elsewhere, and that it would help not only the candidacy of A. J. Weaver for governor but strengthen the republican party in Nebraska and elsewhere.

COMPLAINT AS TO ODORS

Public Safety Head States That Rendering Plant Beyond the City's Jurisdiction.

In reference to recent complaint as to unpleasant odors apparently sweeping out from the west and most offensive when backed by a breeze, Commissioner Bair said Friday that insofar as he can ascertain such odors come from the rendering plant which is outside the city limits and beyond the jurisdiction of the city council. Uptown odors from the west were particularly noticeable Wednesday night. Dr. M. F. Arnholt, superintendent of health, said:

"Odors from the rendering plant and complaints concerning the same are chronic. I understand the board of county commissioners has given the matter some study and that the county physician has made a number of investigations. The plant is located beyond the city limits and our department has no jurisdiction over it."

Doctor Arnholt said that he has received no complaint relative to gas plant odors and that for some months, nothing objectionable in way of odor has come from the sewage disposal plant northeast of the state fair grounds.

Curious Slants People Take on Morals

By WINIFRED BLACK

"IF you don't send me fifty dollars by six o'clock tomorrow night I'm going to kill myself."

WINIFRED BLACK

That's what the letter said—the letter that was received by twenty-five local celebrities in Los Angeles recently.

There was a name and an address, but the name wasn't real and there was something queer about the address and the police went over Los Angeles with a fine-tooth comb trying to find the writer of the letter.

Finally, they found her—and what do you think? She wasn't a criminal at all, and she wasn't insane either, not what you could call actually insane, she was just a "reformer."

She made up her mind that Los Angeles was a very wicked town and she was going to reform it, and she had to have money to hire a hall and get a band to start the reforming business.

So she wrote the suicide letter. Poor thing, she didn't get the money and she couldn't start the crusade, and she couldn't even commit suicide after all.

Los Angeles will have to stay wicked, as far as she's concerned. She doesn't seem to think there was anything wrong about it.

"Why shouldn't they give me the money?" she said when asked about it, "I was going to use it in a good cause."

Oh, don't laugh too hard! Don't we all do a good deal of the same sort of thing? I know a woman who wouldn't steal a pin to save her life, but she'll cheat at a bridge game if she likes the looks of the first prize well enough.

I know another woman who would never think of committing a murder, but she'll take another woman's reputation away in a whisper, and think nothing of it.

I know another woman who goes to church and says her prayers and sings in the choir. She's a good housekeeper and she thinks she's a good mother, but she never sees another woman with a fine diamond ring or a handsome fur coat that her poor silly face doesn't twist in a perfect spasm of envy. She's bringing up her children to be envious and jealous of every human being who has more clothes or a bigger car or a more expensive home than they have. She'd be perfectly amazed if you told her that she might as well expose those children of hers to the smallpox and be done with it, as to bring them up with envy in their hearts.

It's awfully easy to condemn people for some sin that doesn't happen to appeal to us, isn't it? But when it comes to our own little peccadillos—oh, that's a different story, isn't it?

Dream Bubbles

By Myrtle Wood

© 1927, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

THE City Girl dreams. She sees a long, winding road without a house for miles. There are murmuring brooks, whispering trees, friendly creatures of the woods scurry across the road. Birds of brilliant plummage twitter in the trees. There are vast patches of blue skies. At the end of the winding road is a white farmhouse, inhabited by some wood god, or perhaps Pan himself personified in the blue-eyed, farmer.

The Country Girl has her day-dreams. Oh, for the noisy, bustling, lively city, with its topless skyscrapers, its twinkling electric lights, gorgeous shops and exquisite limousines! And the tall, dark, handsome Prince Charming, the man of the world, who steps out of his beautiful, palatial home into the luxurious car. She sees him at home, in the theatre, in the restaurant, and her young heart yearns for all this imagined splendor.

Seen on 5th Ave.

Watch your purse! A warning that has taken on more importance than ever as fashion demands the greatest attention to purse tops. It all depends, of course, on your costume. For semi-formal evening, Fifth Avenue suggests metal with filigree designs, sometimes studded with simulated jewels. And, what can be done with skin patterns or moire ribbon deserves a particular column.

* * *

Unwinding a ribbon bolt this season reveals it has come to play a much more important part than mere trimming. A particularly distinctive dress seen on the avenue is made entirely of two-tone gros-grain. Hats, belts, yokes and bows are flaunting themselves as ribbon-made.

Danger of Insect and Animal Pests

All Vermin Carries Some Form of Disease.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

NOT long ago I read a very interesting book about the establishment of religious organizations in the State of Michigan. One of the things that impressed me was what those early missionaries had to put up with as regards living conditions. The homes of the period were extremely crude and many times dirty, I fear.

DR. COPELAND

One thing that struck me was the prevalence of bed-bugs in that early day. No particular effort was made to get rid of them. Perhaps those old log houses gave such hiding places for these vermim that they could not be destroyed.

Right after the war I went up to the Russian border. The bad food was nothing compared to the annoyance caused by vermin.

One of the professors of Cambridge University wrote a book called "The Minor Horrors of War." He spoke of "animals which work in darkness and in stealth, little animals which in times of peace we politely ignore, yet little animals which in times of War may make or unmake an army corps."

"We are shy of mentioning these organisms in times of Peace," he said, "but all of them are within the cognizance of every medical officer of health and of every police-court missionary. These gentlemen do not talk about them in general society: the subject is as a rule 'taboo.' Yet if we face these troubles with courage and frankness, they can be overcome."

Lice, bed-bugs, fleas, moths, flies, mosquitoes, mites and ticks are the chief insect pests. Rats and mice, and to a lesser degree, other animals of the same family, are among the horrors of peace and war.

Ants and other bugs, as well as some worms, spiders and various stinging insects, together with the poisonius snakes, are other forms of animal life of interest to the physician. But the animal pests I have in mind today are the disease carrying pests. Because they can convey the germs of disease they should be destroyed, or, at least, our homes should be so kept as to make their entrance impossible.

I want you to see what these pests can do:

The mosquito is the one and only means for carrying malaria, yellow fever and one or two other tropical diseases.

The flea carries the plague and the tick transmits relapsing fever. Any insect, like the fly, ant or cockroach, that feeds on fecal matter and decayed food or garbage, can carry germs to the food and drink of the human family.

The germs of cholera and bowel fever and even tuberculosis, Park says, can grow in the intestines of the fly. It is a dangerous insect.

The common house rat and mouse are under suspicion as carriers of disease, as also are all the biting bugs. They should not be tolerated. The house should be freed of them.

No child should be permitted to go about with lice. They are an offense against decency and are a menace to health.

You must not permit rubbish to accumulate in cellar or attic. When it does it becomes a breeding place for rats and mice and is a fire hazard, too.

Every crack and crevice in wall and floor should be filled in with paint or putty. Do not leave a single hiding place for insect life. Watch the bed-joints and other places in the furniture where they can conceal themselves. They are smart as smart can be.

For the sake of the health and lives of your family get rid of all disease-carrying animal life. You cannot afford to take the chances they offer.

Answers to Health Queries

M. L. G. Q.—My twelve-year-old daughter is troubled with a cracking knee joint. The knee has never been injured that I know of and she is very active and healthy, but is growing very fast. What would you advise? At times the knee pains a little.

A.—The trouble is very likely due to a lack of synovial fluid around the joint. Be sure there is no rheumatic tendency. Massaging the parts with warm cod-liver oil upon retiring should be helpful and if very painful, the knee may be bandaged during the daytime until the parts are stronger.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Young "Mr. Jackson" Pays Court to Lovely Mary Harrison.

I SMILED at Katherine as she gave me her softly whispered warning, but there was little real mirth in my apparent amusement. I knew only too well the martyred air which my mother-in-law would be wearing when I should return to the veranda, and the thought of it suddenly irritated me out of all proportion to its importance. My common sense, however, told me that it was my resentment against Dicky which was intensifying all other annoyances, and by the time I reached the veranda I was poised enough to receive with no hint of chagrin the lofty dignity and martyred voice in which she addressed her first words to me.

"I am glad you have returned from your errands, Margaret," she said. "It is past my bedtime, and I really am quite fatigued, but, of course, I could not leave our guests with no hostess present."

Her tone invested our informal little gathering with the punctiliousness of a court function, and when she rose at the end of her little speech and with great formality took leave of the guests it was with the air of a queen leaving a levee. Dicky escorted her most deferentially into the house, the rest of us standing like courtiers at attention, and when we seated ourselves again I saw that the grouping of our guests had shifted itself significantly.

No longer were all of them grouped around Miss Lincoln besieging her with inquiries as to her recovery from her swoon. Lillian was seated next to her and on her other side was the chair Dicky had vacated when he arose to escort his mother upstairs, and to which he came back directly he had finished his errand.

Next to Lillian, but separated from her chair by a small smoking table sat Philip Veritzen, and turned toward his chair was one which at my entrance subtly bore the air of waiting for some particular person. When I had finished listening to my mother-in-law's austere disapproval of my absence and her dignified farewells to the guests, Mr. Veritzen unobtrusively turned the chair toward me and I sat down in it.

I soon discovered, however, that he had not proffered me the seat in order to talk to me. Beyond the merest commonplaces which I guessed were uttered only to camouflage his real purpose he sat in sardonic and intent contemplation of the group diagonally across from him.

Of this group, Mary Harrison, lovely as the most exquisite rose in the garden outside, was the center. At her right, leaning toward her with the fascinating air of deference which only gently bred European men can manage to perfection, was young Mr. "George Logan Jackson" paying unmistakable and determined court to her. At her left, Noel, with a discouraged but stubborn look was sitting doggedly, answering her eagerly when she spoke to him, occasionally interpolating some remark of his own, but for the most part playing the role of an unwilling but fascinated listener to the conversation of his rival.

For rivalry was the only word to use in characterizing the mental condition of the two personable young men upon either side of Dick's beautiful young niece. Of course, Noel's devotion to her was known to all our family, but Dicky, Lillian and I shared with Mary the secret of the claim he had upon her gratitude at the time of her unfortunate experience as the masked dancer.

The attentions of young Mr. Jackson, however, struck an absolutely new note in the tune to which Mary was setting her life. I feared it would be a troublesome complication and the fear was strenegthened when Philip Veritzen bent toward me and with the air and tone of one uttering some banal commonplace concerning the moon, said softly:

"My little protegee is having altogether too many distractions for a young woman with ambitions to become the greatest actress of her time."

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens, and am in love with a boy two years my senior. He always came to my house at least twice a week, but this week he hasn't even called me up. When I do see him, do you think that I should ask him what the matter is or should I pretend not to care? BLUE EYES.

BLUE EYES: My dear, you are a bit too young to take what is probably just a pleasant friendship in such a serious manner. When you see this boy again, I would suggest that you be as friendly as you were before and ignore the incident. If he still desires your friendship, he will suggest another date.

Annie Laurie welcomes letters on problems of general or unusual interest from women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters should be addressed to her in care of this newspaper.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeannette Young Norton

Supper Dishes Pose as Entrees.

DISHES set aside for Sunday night suppers are generally glorified entree dishes. These dishes may be concocted of choice left-overs or of special foods. Often a food resembling another, a "mock" dish, as it is often called, is used successfully. For instance, lambs' sweetbreads—they have to be specially ordered, as American butchers do not keep them on hand always—pose as mock fried oysters and are an excellent substitute.

Get a pound and a half of lamb's sweetbreads, blanch them in cold water five or ten minutes, drain and put on in fresh cold water, adding a teaspoonful of salt, to parboil for fifteen minutes. Drain, blanch again in cold water for two minutes, then drain. Dip the breads in beaten egg, then roll in very fine crumbs or dust thickly with flour. Fry slowly in butter, drain and serve on a hot dish with a smooth highly seasoned tomato sauce in a sauce boat. Garnish with lemon quarters and parsley.

Again the sweetbreads may be parboiled as already directed and then they may be sauted in butter, seasoned with pepper, salt and a little onion juice, with a quarter pound of fresh mushrooms.

Liver Croquettes.

Take a half pound of calf's liver and boil until tender. Drain and chop fine, season with pepper, salt and the juice of an onion. Add a cupful of fine crumbs and a beaten egg, a half teaspoonful of savory powdered herbs, a teaspoonful of currant jelly or a tablespoonful of dry applesauce. Shape into croquettes, roll in beaten egg, then in dry fine crumbs and fry in hot fat. Serve on a hot dish garnished with parsley and small stuffed and baked tomatoes. Also serve a little melted currant jelly with the croquettes.

Cod Nuggets.

Cut from fresh codfish steaks as many nuggets as are to be needed with a sharp small round cutter, the size of small pound cakes. Roll each nugget in beaten egg, then in fine seasoned crumbs and place in a frying basket. Fry quickly in hot fat. Drain, then serve on a hot dish garnished with slices of broiled bacon and parsley. The nuggets resemble scallops and serve as a mock dish for them. Tomato sauce or catsup is served with them.

Turkey Turnovers.

Chop very finely left-over cold turkey, enough to make two cupfuls. Add pepper, salt, a grated onion, a tablespoonful of chopped celery white leaves, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, two heaping tablespoonfuls of cranberry jelly. Have ready a good short piecrust rolled rather thin and cut in squares six inches each way. Put a heaping tablespoonful of the turkey mixture on each with a tablespoonful of turkey gravy or a teaspoonful of butter. Fold over in turnover fashion and pinch the edges. Bake until the crust is done and a delicate brown. Serve on a hot dish with or without a brown sauce, and a small mould of cranberry jelly. Garnish with parsley.

EXTRA BIG DISCOUNT PUT ON BRAGGARTS

When One Has an Exaggerated Ego Boasting Seems to Cut Down His "Market Price" Rather Than Increase It.

By LOUIS E. BISCH

HAVE you ever met the fellow who is fearful you are going to underestimate him? In short order he tells you all about himself, about his achievements, his record of successes, his special aptitudes, the reason why he is just the man you've been looking for all your life.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Or, if the question of a position is not at issue and he already holds a job, he will make all kinds of excuses for being where he is.

"Just a stop-gap waiting for something better to turn up," he's likely to say. "You may not believe it," he goes on, "but I was offered ——." Then follows a recital of his past performances in each and every one of which he stands out clearly as the central figure, the hero.

It is really a temptation to boost yourself, to talk about your abilities—in short, to be a loud-speaker.

You feel, perhaps, that you are misunderstood, that people will not recognize your talents and capabilities unless you draw them to their attention.

And yet, the world has a way of finding out a man's worth and of placing a fairly accurate estimate upon his value.

This, too, without the individual in question saying a word about himself.

There are instances, of course, where men are not getting their just deserts either in recognition, pay, position or opportunity.

But by far and large such cases are mostly the proverbial exceptions that prove the rule.

If a man is honestly not getting a square deal, something is wrong either with those who employ him or with the employee himself.

It pays a firm to place an employee in a position where his greatest ability will be brought out.

It also pays a man to quit a job that throttles his initiative and doesn't give him an opportunity to put forth his best efforts.

Always be suspicious of men who brag!

More than likely their windy explosions are a defense against a deep-seated conviction of their own incompetence and deficiency.

This is sound psychology.

They may be conscious of their shortcomings and may deliberately try to make them up with talk.

Again, they may be unconscious of them, the desire to make a good impression working in the mind like an automatic and compensatory regulator.

Youth tends to brag a lot.

Older men usually learn to know better.

You will note that I have been talking of the male sex only, as though the female sex were free from bragging.

Is it?

I leave it to you.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 23.

Do you, I say, simply and freely choose the best and hold it fast!—Marcus Aurelius.

Sunday's horoscope holds portent of certain precipitate moves or disruptions, which, seeming ominous, may eventuate in stabilizing the fortunes. However, it is advised that the attention be concentrated on spiritual activities.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of stirring events, abrupt and probably unlooked for, but in the long run the fortunes may benefit, especially if handled with diplomacy and prudence, or in agreement with close corporations. A child born on this day should be original and independent, but may succeed in public position or with large corporation through prudence and diplomacy, as well as perseverance and industry.

Notable Nativity: Thomas Pinckney, American statesman.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 24.

According to a long chain of conflicting lunar and mutual aspects, this day may bring forth situations and opportunities which will call for much wise direction and business acumen. There may be critical and unexpected circumstances as well as compensatory openings and alliances which may turn the balance to the profitable side of the ledger. But tact and good judgment are required.

Those whose birthday it is will have a year to test their mettle as well as their discretion and business acumen. But there will be good opportunities for success and valuable connections. A child born on this day may be ambitious and independent, possibly erratic and spectacular, but it may have many opportunities in life with talents and skill to grasp them.

Notable Nativity: George W. Hough, American astronomer.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

Madame Designs an Evening Wrap.

MADAME came in with a preoccupied air and going to her desk took up a letter over which she frowned.

"Miss Alin wants me to make her an evening coat, and it must be 'different,'" she finally remarked.

"Why not that French model?" Haidee suggested.

"Oh, she has seen that. In fact, I think she saw most of the models the other day when she was here. She could not make up her mind then, and now she sends me this material and asks me to make her a wrap. She leaves it entirely to me, but it must be distinctive. Fancy!" Madame shrugged expressively. She opened a package that lay on the table and disclosed a piece of transparent velvet of the most exquisite shade of deep sapphire blue. It was a gorgeous color.

"I shall enjoy that," Madame admitted, looking at it admiringly, "but Miss Alin is so difficult to please, and she does not even give me a hint as to how she wants it made."

"May I make a suggestion, Madame?" I asked. "Miss Alin is so tall and slim that I think she would be stunning in a wrap made like the one I saw among those imported models at Wedgewood's yesterday. I made a sketch of it. You see, I have it here. It was of velvet and had the wide cape sleeves, and though the coat part was cut in straight lines it had at the hipline a sort of plaited effect."

Madame exclaimed, "Indeed that is excellent for Miss Alin, but I do not like that surplus collar. I shall change the collar to make it a more effective background for the face."

She made the wrap of the sapphire blue velvet, with the cape sleeves and the fitted hip effect, but the collar was entirely different and added greatly in chic and distinction. It was shirred and stood up with a fan effect, while white fur at least four inches wide edged it. The contrast of the white fur against the blue velvet was beautiful.

Miss Alin came in to get the wrap, and she was prepared to dislike it, I could tell by her skeptical expression, but when she had it on and saw her blonde hair against that white fur and blue velvet, she could not help being enchanted with it.

Sapphire Blue Velvet Has Cape Sleeves and Unique Collar.

There was a chorus of admiration from Madame and Haidee and Pam, while I chuckled to myself, for that was not an imported model at all, but one I had designed myself. To be sure, I got the idea from an imported model, but I made enough changes to be able to call it original, Madame's collar improved it, I had to admit.

I didn't dare tell Madame, but I certainly was pleased over it.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

David Spies a Queer Little Sail.

WHEN David saw the queer looking, dark, sail-like thing gliding through the water he stood perfectly still and watched it.

Up and down it would go with the waves and David was at a loss to know what it was.

"Looks like a sail all right," he mused out loud, "but I can't see any boat under it. Oh, dear, I wish——"

"Gracious me," laughed a merry voice and Happy Giggles, the dear little elfin from Make-Believe-Land, hopped down upon the sands beside the astonished David. "I thought you never would wish for me. I've been ready to jump for the last fifteen minutes."

"Oh, Happy Giggles!" David exclaimed, shaking the wee elfin's hands. "I'm sure glad to see you. I've been watching that funny thing sailing on the waves for ever so long, wondering what it was."

The elfin hopped upon a stone and shaded his eyes with his hands. Then he laughed merrily and blew a shrill blast on his magic whistle.

The dark colored sail hesitated for a second, turned and headed straight for the shore on which David sat.

"Hello, there, Mr. Swordfish," called Happy Giggles. "Come on in. I want you to meet little David Dorn."

David saw a long pointed sword-like thing shoot through the water and stop near his feet. It was attached to the head of a long slender fish. The queer looking dark colored sail David had been watching was nothing more than Mr. Sword-fish's queer fin that helped him glide through the waters.

"I must be going," Said Mr. Sword Fish.

While Mr. Swordfish and Happy Giggles talked David had a good chance to look him over.

His great long pointed sword-like upper jaw was almost as long as his whole body and the end of it was as sharp as a needle. It was a dark brown color above and a lighter shade beneath. The fish itself was a bluish-black on top and a silvery white underneath. The queer looking dark sail that David had noticed above the waves was a sickle-shaped fin. Its large tail was shaped very much like that of a mackerel. Mr. Swordfish's eyes were quite large and they danced with glee as he noticed the look on David's face.

"You have never seen a Swordfish before, have you, Sonny?" he laughed. "Well, I don't mind being stared at; so go right ahead. Some sword, don't you think?"

"Sure is a dandy," laughed David. "And do you really use it to fight with?"

"Indeed I do, David," replied Mr. Swordfish. "Why, not so very long ago I had a wicked fight with a crowd of fishermen and if Squeedee hadn't come along and helped me they would have gotten me. I did break off the end of my sword, I never rush into a fight, but if anyone takes after me I soon scatter him with my sword. Happy Giggles, come again some time and bring David. Maybe I'll have more time to chat then than I have now. I just must be going," and away he swished through the waters.

David and Happy Giggles watched his queer little sail until it was just a wee speck in the distance. Then they ran down the beach in search of new adventures.

MRS. GRAY IS ALSO 'AVERAGE WOMAN'

WIFE OF "AVERAGE MAN" AS TYPICAL AS HE IS.

Does Housework, Looks After Two Children and Finds Time for Interest in Dozen Other Things.

FORT MADISON, Ia., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—The "average American woman,"—wife of Roy L. Gray, the "average man"—is as typical of America as her husband.

Mrs. Gray does her own housework, looks after her two children and finds time to take an interest in a dozen other things.

She likes the radio better than she does the moving pictures, she said. "It's easier to turn the dial than it is to traipse off to the movies," and she enjoys things like the Tunney-Dempsey fight, she said. Besides, she can keep an eye on her children. hSe wouldn't stir out of the house to see "movies of the fight tho."

Mrs. Gray leads a normal life, she thinks.

"I read the newspapers like everybody else," she said. "I look at the front page, and I always get to the 'funnies' sooner or later."

Mrs. Gray—her name was Etna Barton in 1914 before she married the "average man"—is neither large nor small—"just average" in size.

She is attractive. Her clothes are not cut extremely, but they are up-to-the-mode and sensible.

She was surprised that her husband and herself have been singled out as a sample of Americanism.

"I really don't feel any differently than I did before Roy was singled out for this honor, if you want to call it that. We aren't any different than we ever have been, you know," she confided.

Children don't obey so well nowadays as they did when she was a girl, Mrs. Gray vouchsafed.

"Maybe they do, but I'm sure they get much better training in school now than they did then. And in church too. The churches are keeping up their good influence."

Mrs. Gray is interested in her husband's tailoring business, but the home is her real sphere, she feels.

"I know what Roy is doing in a general way, but I attend to the house, and he to his business, and that way we get along," she said. "It keeps me pretty busy just looking after all the retails of running a home. That, you know, is a real job,—a job for any real woman."

Mrs. Gray does not drive her husband's automobile, because her husband runs it whenever the family takes an outing. She believes in woman's suffrage, and thinks all women should vote unless some untoward happening prevents it.

FERN ANDRA.

Fern Andra, who was born and reared in Watseka, Ill., later became one of Germany's greatest movie stars and who withdrew partly from the limelight after she married Kurt Prenzel, German boxer, is talking of getting a divorce, according to the Nationalzeitung. But Fern is furbishing up her German to free it of its Illinois accent, to appear in a Berlin theater in a play written for her, and she hopes her success will win back the temperamental boxer, who has left her.—P. & A.

When Murder Would Not Out

By Vance Wynn.

The Murdered Butler.

Herbert Bramall, butler in the home of James R. Deering, lawyer, at 45 West 54th street, New York city, was shot and killed on the night of January 24, 1926, as he opened the grilled door of the house to an unidentified man who had rung the bell.

In this sentence we have the material for a mystery melodrama, the only difference being that the play would have to have a satisfying conclusion, while the drama from real lift remains as puzzling today as when it first shocked and amazed the public.

There was only one witness to the murder, and that was Francis Lovell, the cook. Bramall had been talking to her when the bell rang. She watched him walk down the hall, open the vestibule door and then open the grill and plate glassed front door. The moment he did so a man, with his hat pulled down over his eyes, and whose face was not visible in the darkness, pressed an automatic pistol against the butler's heart and pulled the trigger. Then, instantly, he turned and ran down the steps into the fog. Bramall staggered back into the hallway and fell dead on the floor.

What was the object of the murder? It could scarcely have been for the purpose of robbery, because the unidentified assailant did not attempt to enter the house. Could it have been for revenge? And if so, what could have been the grievance of the murderer? Mrs. Deering telephoned the police, and they closely questioned the cook, but the sum and substance of her testimony was that the unknown caller had shot the butler and then vanished into the night. She did not see him at all and only realized what was going on when Bramall staggered back into the nallway.

Mrs. Bertha Bramall, the butler's wife, was out at the time. She left only a minute or two before the murder occurred. She returned at 9 o'clock to find that she was a widow.

She said she had not seen the stranger come to the door, but had walked as far as Fifth avenue and 42d street and then back again. In all she had been gone twenty minutes. She was married to Bramall three years previously, and they seemed to live happily.

The investigation made by the police showed that the butler was a native of England. He had been in the service of the Duke of Cornwalls at Northumberland, and when he came to this country had been employed by the Anthony J. Drexel Biddles in their Philadelphia home. Bramall was a world war veteran with a good record. He had been with the Deerings for three years, and was regarded as an unusually competent servant. Mr. Deering was very much affected by his death and paid a high tribute to him.

It seems strange that such a tragedy could be enacted in one of the finest sections of New York without causing a ripple of excitement. Nearly all of the homes there are occupied by millionaires, one in the same block being the residence of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

This might well be called "the clueless mystery," because the police did not have a shred of evidence to go on. There were no foot marks or finger prints. If there had been a struggle it might have left something in its wake. But there was nothing—not even a button, a bit of torn clothing, and, of course, no weapon. The assassin came like a ghost out of the night and vanished as noiselessly.

Was it the work of a maniac? Was it jealousy? Could it have been some left-over grievance of the great war? Bramall lived-quietly and had such a good disposition that it was difficult to think that he had any enemies—at least of the killing kind. The deadliness of the crime and the expedition with which it was carried out suggested planning and forethought. Also it had all the earmarks of having been committed by a professional expert in the use of a gun.

"DAPHNE'S IN LOVE"

A Big City Story.

By Negley Farson

INSTALLMENT VI.

Daphne called up Mrs. Woodbottle at luncheon to see if a note had come for her—and one had! She almost screamed her delight.

"Wh-what kind of a note is it, Mrs. Woodbottle?"

Pause

"Why—er—just a regular note. A young man left it when I was doing me dishes."

"What did he look like?"

Snort.

"I don't know. Didn't look at 'im. Want me to read it to—"

"No—no!"

"All right, me darlin'," she heard Mrs. Woodbottle chuckle, "ye'll find it on your bed."

"Oh—"

But it spoiled her whole after noon. She could not do any work If she only knew what was in that note, of course, then everything would be all right. Her mind would be at rest. But business was business—it certainly was!

The day finally dragged itself thru, and at 4:30 she went to Jake Schaffer and asked if she might go home.

"It's very important," she said.

Jake grinned at her, and shifted his cigar swiftly across his mouth

"Very important?" he asked.

"Yes—awfully."

"What's his name?" Then—

"Go on," said Jake, when he saw her confusion. "Beat it!"

Adorable Jake!

It was from him.

"If you aren't doing anything tomorrow meet me at the Tip Top about 1:15 and we will drive somewhere afterward. Hope you can make it."

It was signed merely "G. L."

It must be an invitation to lunch!

Heavens, what would she wear?

She rushed for her dresser—threw the things on the floor—sat there surrounded by a few little dresses—and wanted to weep. She had nothing that was good enough. That one evening dress had been her single splurge.

She picked up a plain, moss-green silk and stared at it appraisingly. She knew that she looked well in that—but it was mussed. Her hat? She would buy a new hat! She knew the one she wanted—she would get it on her way back from the office tomorrow.

She ran to the landing—

"Mrs. Woodbottle!"

"Yis!"

"Can I see you a moment?"

"Ye can—there's nothing to prevint it."

Daphne dashed back into her room and scooped the green dress from the floor. She snatched a pair of fawn stockings, and then threw them back—she could do them herself. She rattled down stairs.

Mrs. Woodbottle, who had her old man's dinner going, was sitting on the back steps—taking the air.

"Darling!" began Daphne.

Mrs. Woodbottle stiffened.

"What is it?"

Daphne held out the green dress. Mrs. Woodbottle turned her head away and looked down the expanse of her back yard—at that nice black dirt.

"No!" she said.

"Please!"

"Oh- my! She wants to be pretty!"

Daphne sat down beside her.

"Mrs. Woodbottle?"

Mrs. Woodbottle knew that she was going to yield, but it was a thing which must be done with dignity.

"D'ye think," she said, "that I've no pleasures of me own? That in the cool of the evenin' I should be bendin' over a stove! A fine night like this?"

Daphne leaned against Mrs Woodbottle's bulk,and said nothing.

"An' what time will ye want it?"

"At half past 12 o'clock tomorrow will do."

"Let me see it."

Mrs. Woodbottle held up the green dress.

"You—with your bare knees and your blue eyes—walkin' the streets in this camisole!"

"But my knees aren't bare," said Daphne, sticking out her legs. "That's out of date now with these short dresses."

"An' a damn good thing it is!" said Mrs. Woodbottle. She put out a red hand and grasped Daphne's ankle. "That's enough for any daycent man to see of you before you're led to the church."

Daphne leaned against that comfortable bulk.

"Sometimes—I wonder if I ever will get married, Mrs. Woodbottle."

"Do ye, indeed! An' better luck to you if ye don't."

Mrs. Woodbottle sighed and stared at the sordid prospect of back yards surrounding them.

"Before ye get married life is like going up and down in one o' thim elyvators in the stores. Ye see all the fine things—and ye can get off at any floor that happens to please you. At least, ye think ye can—and as long as ye think ye can that's all that is necessary."

"It's whin," said Mrs. Woodbottle with a dramatic gesture toward the rusty tin cans in her yard—"it's whin ye get off that your troubles begin—whin ye git off by mistake in the basement—like I did."

Mrs. Woodbottle gave a violent sigh, heaving Daphne alarmingly.

"Yis, the saddest day of me life was whin I knew I wasn't going up and down any more—an' that these tin cans and dead cats was going to be the garden of Eden of Norsh MacGillycuddy's dreams."

There was a sympathetic silence the huge Mrs. Woodbottle and Daphne sitting there like a great cow and her calf.

"But if ye're bound to get married," advised Mrs. Woodbottle, "an' nothin' will satisfy ye until ye see for yerself—then sell out on the top o' the market. Which is but another way of saying while you've still got your looks an' the young man is like putty in your hands. Don't pick a cart horse for the long race of life!"

An old man came out the back door of the house opposite them, sat down on his steps, and lit an old corncob pipe. The blue smoke suggested something to Daphne, and she reached into the little pocket of her skirt and brought out a packet of cigarets. She offered one to Mrs. Woodbottle.

"An' it's me!" declaimed the irate Mrs. Woodbottle, "that's been trying to tell you about life!"

"TO TELL YER DE TRUTH, SISTERS,' HE LEERED, 'MR. GRABOWSKI'S HUNTIN' FOR A GUY NAMED MOONEY.'"

She gave a heave which shook Daphne off.

"Away with ye now, an' leave me alone with me thoughts."

Daphne went up to her room and lay down on her bed. But first she ran the water into the washbasin and put her fawn stockings to soak. It was all right for Mrs. Woodbottle to talk that way about marriage—but then she had been unlucky in life. She had told Daphne herself that her wedding present had been a pair of black eyes. Mrs. Woodbottle did not know anything about love. She could not have felt as if she would turn to fire when Mr. Woodbottle touched her. Nobody could have felt that way about Mr. Woodbottle. Mrs. Woodbottle could not have felt emotions like that—she was too big. Love was a fragile thing—the most precious secret. It was all right to joke about it with the girls, but that wasn't love. If you were really in love they couldn't tear it out of you—no, not if they tortured you! Love was so rare that when its wings just brushed you it glorified you at once.

She lay there enthralled by her vision, trying to imagine what sacrifice she could make to prove herself worthy of her love. She would do anything.

Ivy came home about eight and snapped on the light. When she saw Daphne she rushed to her and flung herself on her knees by the bed.

"Help me!" she sobbed. "Oh, Daffy, help me!"

Daphne was too stunned for a moment to do anything but stare at Ivy's terrified face. It frightened her. She timidly put out her hand, and Ivy seized it, pressing it against her hot, swollen cheeks.

"Oh, Daffy! Oh, Daffy—he's gone! He's gone!"

Daphne leaped off her bed, crouched there on the floor and held Ivy tight to her. She held her as hard as she could.

"Oh, Daffy!" Ivy sighed wearily and let her head fall back on Daphne's shoulder. "It's over, it's the end."

Daphne pressed her cheek against hers and kissed her, whispered in her ear.

"Tell me," she whispered, "tell me." And then she held her close. "It's Ben?"

Ivy nodded, gave way to an uncontrollable surge of grief, and told her.

"It happened only a few minutes after you left."

Ivy, who had been standing by the front desk, saying good night to the telephone girl, told how a big man had rushed thru the door. He came straight to the desk, hit it with his fist, and shouted Ben's name.

"Have you got a fellow named Ben Mooney that works here?" he demanded.

The phone girl tried to stop him from shouting and asked him what he wanted.

"I want to see Mooney," he said. "Where is he?"

Daphne had to hold Ivy fiercely; she was shaking now with her sobs. "It was awful! Everybody crowded around, and then Mr. Schaffer came out and asked the man what he wanted.

"The man shook his fist in Mr. Schaffer's face. 'I want Ben Mooney!' he said."

As she mentioned Ben's name Ivy started weeping again, and Daphne had to wait and hold her until she exhausted herself and wearily went on with her story. Mr. Schaffer had threatened to call the police, and the man told him to go ahead and do it—and see what happened to Ben. Mr. Schaffer tried to get the man off to one side and told the others to go back to their desks. Then Ben came in at the front door.

"I saw him," sobbed Ivy, "and I started to run to tell him—but he had seen him—the man! Ben went white as a sheet and just stood there—with everybody watching him. Then, Daffy, Ben tried to laugh—"

Another paroxysm, and Ivy came to the end. They had gone away together—the whole office had watched them drive off in the man's car. Ben was gone.

"And he knew!" sobbed Ivy, this time making no effort to hold back her brief. "He knew—he knows now."

Forlorn, crushed by her wretchedness, Ivy told how, when she had rushed out to waarn him, Ben held up his hand. That was when he had tried to smile.

"He didn't look at anything else—he just looked at me! And—you should have seen the look in his eyes."

It was the final blow that Ivy dealt herself—to tell the torture of Ben's last look. He had found her, and stood within ten feet of her—and it was too late.

* * *

"But perhaps it isn't too late!" reasoned Daphne, when she had caressed Ivy into quietude again. "Maybe its only a row over an order or something like that—you know what Ben is."

"Huh!" choked Ivy, in a pathetic attempt at derision. "As if Ben would be frightened over anything like that!"

That was true! Ben was no coward. His outrageous fist fight with two of his disgruntled beer-running customers was still told as the saga of the Eureka Motor Truck company. It must have taken something pretty awful to make Ben go white.

"Well, let's do something," said Daphne. "It's no good sitting here."

Ivy knew the man's name—Grabowski. One of the salesmen in the office had recognized him. He was a mattress-maker, or something like that, out on Blue Island avenue.

"Well, come on, then," said Daphne who instantly began to see hope ahead, now that they were doing something about it. "Put a cold towel on your face, and I'll get out your dress." She pulled out another dress for Ivy to replace the bedraggled one she had on.

She saw her fawn stockings soaking in the washbasin, and took them out. She gave a start as she did it—oh! But she couldn't think about that—not now. She ran the cold tap and wrung out the towel. She felt angry as she did so, but the sight of Ivy's tearful, trusting face brushed away any feelings of remorse for herself.

"Now, then," she said, snatching her purse, "it's us for a taxi. We'll go to the office first."

They drove down past the brilliantly lighted hotels of the boulevard and into the now silent automobile row. The night watchman let them into the Eurkea Motor Truck company by the garage entrance; and Ivy pointed, with a catch in her voice, to Ben's car, which some one had wheeled inside. There was something tragic in its abandoned position among the great resting trucks.

Daphne went into Mr. Brinton's office and with the key he had given her opened his privaet desk. She took out the ring of master keys and went to the sales office files.

"If he's on Blue Island," she said, "Ben must have called on him, and there'll be a report. We'll find it."

There was no trouble in finding the report in Ben's file. There was a thick sheaf under the name of Grabowski. Daphne saw, with a feeling of dismay, that he had been calling there almos tevery three days—and that the last report was six weeks old. She read it; it was the usual Ben's laconic style:

"Isadore Grabowski, house furnishings, Blue Island avenue. He's a tough old nut—but I'll crack him yet. Got to keep after him.

B. M."

That was just like Ben all over again! She skimmed thru the reports that dated back over a year, but found nothing there that would give them a clew—nothing, in fact, that showed Mr. Grabowski to be anywhere near buying a truck. It was just Ben's usual "line"—hopeful bunk—and one carad, which said: "Mr. Grabowski promised to come down to the office. B. M."

Well—Mr. Grabowski had come.

"There's nothing here," she told Ivy, putting the cards back in the file, "but I've got the address, so we'll go out there now."

She replaced the master keys in Mr. Brinton's desek; and the night watchman put out the lights after them and let them out. He asked them what they were after.

"Nothing," said Daphne.

The taxi was still waiting; they had forgotten to pay him off, and Daphne told Ivy to get in. She gave the Blue Island address. The driver looked back at them wonderingly and then shot the car down the deserted boulevard.

"But I haven't any money," said Ivy.

"I have. It's all right."

They sat there without speaking, Ivy snuggling herself against Daphne's body. They rolled out on the lonely Blue Island road. Daphne stared in a dazed way at the meter. She saw it mounting up and up and up, and she knew that she would never be able to get that new hat for tomorrow—not unless she could borrow ahead from the office—but still—this was nearer home—this thing that had happened to Ivy—and Ledoux would have to take her as she was. She couldn't let Ivy down. She felt a little ashamed of herself that she should even be thinking of such things, and she hugged Ivy gently.

They were out now in the back lots, where the black bulk of the city lay behind them, under its yellow fuzz of bright lights. It was empty out here.

"Hold me," whispered Ivy, "love me. It'll be awful without Ben. I—I'd sort of counter on him."

They came to a little cluster of black buildings and the taxi slowed to a stop.

"There's your number," the driver said.

As he spoke a couple of young men jumped up from the doorstep and ran out. They saw the two girls and showed their surprise. And Daphne, when she saw their faces, felt frightened. She didn't know what to say. One of them held his hand out to her, with a grin:

"Well, sister, what can we do for you?"

"Does Mr. Grabowski live here?"

"He sure does."

"Can—can we speak to him?"

Then the two men started to laugh. They turned to each other and started laughing again.

"Mr. Grabowski's busy tonight—he's out shooting son-in-laws. Ha. ha! That's good. Yeah!"

The youth leaned into the taxi, getting as close to the girl's faces as he could.

"To tell yer de truth, sisters," he leered, with his hand to the side of his mouth, "to tell yer de secret—Mr. Grabowski's huntin' for a guy named Mooney."

"Yeah. Gonna make him marry his girl!"

Daphne felt Ivy slide down beside her.

"Go ahead!" she screamed to the taxi driver. "Drive on!"

Railway Commissioner John E. Curtiss is back from Dallas, where he sat in on several important sessions of the national association of railway commissioners. The principal theme discussed one day was the co-operation between the state and federal commissions on the joint hearing of rate cases that involve directly or indirectly both interstate and intrastate rates. Opinion was divided as to whether this makes for speedy results, the delay in the grain rates case being cited by critics as one illustration. Mr. Curtiss found a strong sentiment in favor of continuing it. One point made by critics was that one such case breeds a lot of other cases, and nothing is really settled. The commissioners heard a report from the highway safety committee, of which Mr. Curtiss is a member, which urges uniform legislation as to devices and signals.

MAY STRAIGHTEN HIGHWAY

Rail Commission Umpire in Relocation of Lincoln Highway on Railroad Lands.

Railway Commissioner Randall sat as umpire Saturday in the matter of the Lincoln highway location for a distance of seven miles between Duncan and Silver Creek in Platte county. The state department of public works, repreesnted by State Engineer Cochran, and the Union Pacific railroad, represented by C. A. Magaw, attorney, are the principals in the dispute.

Nothing will be done by the railway commission in the form of an order until a necessary resolution is adopted by the county board. It is proposed to change the highway from the north side of the railway line to the south side and thus do away with four grade crossings which are deemed dangerous. Two of these crossings may possibly be left open for private but not for public use. Commissioner Randall desires to eliminate ten kinds in the proposed new highway which now appear uopn blue prints within a distance of seven miles. To make the highway straight it will be necessary for the Union Pacific to abrogate leases of its right of way to several farmers. The Platte county board reports that consent of all but one farmer to cancel these leases have been obtained and the one remaining may do the same. The highway is all on Union Pacific right of way. The railroad company will make new leases to the department of public works or the state for the proposed relocation. Railway Commissioner Randall also desires to make the new highway 100 feet wide instead of 66 feet.

DENSMORE AT DEDICATION

Vice Commander of American Legion Speaks at Hubbell Exercises on Saturday.

HUBBELL, Neb., Oct. 22.—Leonard Densmore of Wymore, vice department commander of the American Legion, was the principal speaker here today at the dedication of a new towr and flagstaff, a memorial to the soldier dead of all American wars. Speaking of preparedness and pacifism, he said in part:

"We men of the American Legion well know the folly of being unprepared for war. We have seen this nation enter a terrible conflict unprepared, and we know what it cost in lives and treasure. We came back determined that as long as wars exist, the United States should be prepared to defend itself skillfully and effectively. We expected the national deefnse act to insure the minimum for safety, but we have seen congress fail to make the necessary appropriations, while our army was reduced below the danger point and our navy slipped back. Much of this skimping was done in the name of economy, but we cannot see the economy of saving a few millions a year and then squandering billions in frantic preparations when war does strike. The Legion is demanding that the defense act be kept effective."

Mr. Densmore reviewed the history of the American Legion and told of its activities in community service and of what it hoped to accomplish.

POLITICAL MOVE WRONG

Roy Cochran, History Instructor, Denounces Exploitation of the Schools.

Roy E. Cochran of the history department of the University of Nebraska, speaking before the Professional Men's club at the Lincoln hotel Saturday on "Political Interference With the Teaching and Writing of History" declared that political exploitation of schools is vicious and must be stopped.

Mr. Cochran discussed the situation in New York and Chicago and said that historians are partly to blame for the situation because of many opinionated and ill-advised essary-type books and articles in which they fail to show scientific impartiality and an open mind. These historians also fail to make it clear that a history text is merely "his story," a version which needs supplementing by other versions. Public schools need all versions, he said, and a more tolerant open-minded view on all historical questions.

FEAR WOMEN KIDNAPED

Murder of French Resident General's Nephew Feared After He Fought Moroccans.

CASA BLANCA, Morocco, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Kidnaping by tribesmen of two French women and the murder of a nephew of Theodore Steeg, French resident-general of Morocco, after a desperate fight for his life and the honor of his companions, was feared here today.

M. Steeg—the nephew—had driven in an automobile with Mme. Prokorof and Mme. Steineil along a forest road near the zone of the hostile Beni Millal tribe.

Natives reported finding the deserted automobile in the forest. Scattered about it, they said, were cartridges, pearls from a necklace, and hairpins.

A white settler who participated in a search for Steeg and his companions declared first news of the tragedy came from a dog that accompanied Steeg.

The dog, badly wounded, reached a farm near the forest. Settlers followed his trail of blood back to the automobile.

Near the automobile, the settler said, they found the body of Steeg. Near him were the bodies of dogs he had had with him.

LINCOLN AGENT INJURED

Earl E. Brown of Waterloo, Ia., in Serious Condition at Fort Dodge From Wounds.

FT. DODGE, Ia., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Unconscious and unable to tell how he received severe scalp wounds, Earl E. Brown, of Waterloo, Ia., agent for a Lincoln, Neb., insurance company, is in a serious condition in a hospital here today.

With his head and face covered with blood and teeth marks visible on his hands, Brown staggered into a home here and was taken to the Ft. Dodge hospital.

His automobile was found near Manson, M. C. Tullar, sheriff of Webster county, said. The fact that $25 in currency was found on Brown tends to discredit a theory of robbery in the alleged assault, Tullar said.

SOCIETY BEHIND COUNTERS.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—"Say, sister, step lively. I gotta date with a boy friend and I need those new hose." Lines such as this, and similar remarks, were addressed to regular patrons by shop girls here today as positions at the buying counter were reversed. The occasion was the activity of the Portland Junior League taking over the counters in department stores as part of a program for raising money for a local hospital benefit. The society girls acted as sales girls all day. Numerous shop girls, forced into a day of idleness, enjoyed the experience of buying from those who usually buy from them and it was rumored that one or two took advantage of the unusual situation by "getting even."

JACKSON RETURNS FROM TEXAS FAIR

Pronounces Dallas Fair Largest in the World, Fostered by Business Men of the City.

Secretary Jackson of the Nebraska state fair board has returned from Dallas, Tex., where he attended what he calls the largest fair in the United States, consequently the largest fair in the world. "While it is called a state fair and has a large territory to draw from," said Secretary Jackson, "it is fostered by the city of Dallas and is in reality a fair for that city and by that city. This fair has wonderful buildings and grounds, including a summer park where bathing and amusements are conducted the year round. The fair will close Sunday with an attendance estimated at more than 1,000,000.

"The Dallas fair is full of days. There is Dallas day, when all business houses in the city close and people attend. Last year on account of floods and poor cotton crop the fair ran behind $42,000. Business men of Dallas immediately gave checks enough to cover the loss and enabled the fair to pay its expenses. This year the fair will make money. This year 226,000 people attended Dallas day.

"I was present on soldiers' day, the day set apart for entertainment of confederate soldiers and their friends. A dinner was served the old time fiddler played for the dance that followed.

"Niggers' day is another big day at the Dallas fair. That is the word used. There is no attempt to smooth it down into negro or colored people's day. Few whites attend on that day and the negroes flock in and enjoy themselves in their own way with baseball games in a stadium such as we have here on the university grounds. Fifty thousand, mostly negroes, were on the grounds.

"Charles Graff of Bancroft accompanied me to Dallas where he saw his sons show Red Poll cattle and walk away with championships and sweepstakes and nearly everything in the way of premiums. Mr. Graff went home when he received word that the farm house on his farm had burned. The fair at Oklahoma this year had two weeks of rain and will lose $40,000."

WILLIS ASSAILS TAMMANY VIEWS

Ohio Senator Attacks Dr. Butler; Declares Any of Numerous Republicans Would Make Good President.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, today issued a statement assailing Tammany and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, and declaring any one of numerous republicans would be "an excellent president" and able to defeat the "Tammany candidate whom democracy is certain to nominate."

Designation of the republican candidate would adjust itself in due time, said the statement which Willis issued after a call on President Coolidge.

Willis indicated conviction that Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York would be the democratic nominee for president and said:

"It seems perfectly apparent that the progressive democrats of the south and west have decided to put their principles in cold storage and smother their consciences by combining once again with Tammany in the fond hope of securing entrance to the white house. It will be an interesting spectacle to see southern and western democrats casting their ballots for Governor Smith, who is the antithesis of most of their ideals."

Willis promised the republican platform would not be written by Victor Berger, socialist, Wisconsin, or by Dr. Butler, both of whom, he said, had urged repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. Willis classed Butler as an internationalist who favored debt cancellation. He said there would be no quibbling in the 1928 republican platform over supporting the constitution.

Willis approved the administration foreign debt policy. He said that if and when the tariffs were revised such action would be taken by republican protectionists.

There must be adjustment, he said, to enable the farmer, who has always given cordial support to the protective system, to enjoy its benefits.

He said the McNary-Haugen bill with its equalization fee ought not to become a law and that agricultural relief lay in the development of co-operative marketing.

Willis said the next congress must boldly meet the question of flood control.

The United States, he continued, would enter into no competitive race in naval armaments but would do the things necessary to protect American interest. Apropos the tariff question he thought it would be a vast mistake "to invite industrial chaos by discussing general revision in this session."

"The restrctive immigration law has come to stay," Wilis said, "and it will not be weakened by this or any succeeding republican administration."

Willis, in his conversation with Mr. Coolidge, urged the merits of a bill he will introduce in the next congress to transfer the Philippines from the war department to the interior department.

HUNDRED BUSHEL CORN

Ten Acre Experimental Field Near McCook Will Make an Exceptional Yield.

M'COOK, Neb., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Corn grown on a ten acre tract at the farm of Gerald Wilcox near here, will yield 100 bushels to the acre, test picking by County Agent Ulrich indicates.

The corn was raised by Wilcox for experimental purposes. The ten acres was irrigated at intervals but the ground was broken with only ordinary thoroness, the seed selected with no more than usual care and there was no fertilization of the soil.

First pickings showed that the tract will average 110 bushels to the acre, but as the corn is not yet dry, it was estimated that shrinkage will cut this to about 100 bushels.

Wilcox plante d his rows 32 inches apart instead of the usual 36 inches. The soil on which the corn was produced has been under plow for thirty-five years and under steady cultivation for the past twelve years. Potatoes were grown there last year and corn the two preceding years.

The best corn from the tract will be sent to Lincoln for student judging work and entry into competitive exhibits.

Another southwestern Nebraska farmer, Frank Hunyon, has a field of un-irrigated corn which Ulrich says will closely approximate Wilcox's yield on the specially irrigated tract.

Mrs. Carrington obtained her divorce in Chicago in April on the grounds of cruelty. Edward Carrington publicly flogged his brother last spring.

OKLAHOMA CHIEF IN VIGOROUS REPLY

Governor's Secretary Says Demand for Special Session Result of "Scurrilous Hotel Lobby Campaign."

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—State house circles were speculating today upon the outcome of the first formal reply from the oice of Gov. Henry S. Johnston to rumors of a special legislative session.

Declaring present agitation for a special session was the result of "a scurrilous hotel lobby campaign" by "disappointed spoilsmen," the governor's secretary, H. E. Sullivan, last night issued a statement saying the governor could no longer remain silent.

His statement, made while the governor was in Tulsa on a speaking tour of northern sections of the state, was taken as that of the governor.

He named five democratic leaders as participants in the attack.

The statement alleged the five men, once in the closest confidence of the governor, had turned against him when "thwarted in designs."

The statement came at a moment when special session talk and impeachment agitation had been revived by the anti-administration groups.

It was reported the legislative roll call, made secretly, had now been found favorable to the calling of a special session, but this has not been substantiated.

Altho Governor Johnston, a lawyer of Perry, Okla., elected last fall, has been the target of facetious criticism relating to his study of Rosicrucian philosophy and the retaining of Mrs. O. O. Hammonds as his confidential secretary, no o pen charges have been made by his enemies.

LIFE IN LEGION "HELL."

LONDON (United Press).—All the glamor of being a member of the French Foreign Legion evaporate as soon as the recruit reaches North Africa, according to Frank Waterhouse, an Englishman who deserted from the legion and escaped back to England. His life in the legion he described as "a year in hell." "The pay," he continued," amounted to a little over a shilling a month. The heat was terrific, and the food far from appetizing though, to be fair, I must say there was plenty of it." Waterhouse said that at one stage of his career in the legion he was quartered with eighteen men, only two of whom spoke the same language. "Probably the thing that struck me most," he said, "was the number of men I met in the legion who had at one time held influential positions in the world. One of the men, a Prince de Georges, said that at one time he was a ruler of Georgia and a courier to the late czar. He said that he had been worth nearly $75,000,000 before he had been driven out of Russia by the bolsheviks."

REDUCED FLORAL OFFERINGS

STOCKHOLM (United Press).—A home for the aged, erected entirely with money which would otherwise have been expended upon wreaths and flowers for funerals, has resulted from the lifework of Miss Alma Hedin of Stockholm, sister to Sven Hadin, famous explorer. Six years ago, Miss Hedin evolved the idea of utilizing in a more dignified and beneficial manner the large sums invested in floral offerings at funerals. Feeling that the dead would be remembered and honored in a more fitting and lasting way by the erection of a permanent institution of charity, she launched her campaign for the so-called "Flower Fund." Miss Hedin did not advocate the total discontinuance of flowers on the Swedish graves, but she suggested that only half of what was usually offered, should be sent, and that the other half be submitted, in the form of cash, to the fund.

Students Scalping On Sale Of Grid Tickets

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—While students at Northwestern university prepared to reap a rich harvest in "scalping" tickets for the University of Illinois-Northwestern football game today, university and federal authorities joined to prevent such action.

The Daily Northwestern, student publication, today printed a story saying that students had cornered 3,000 tickets and were selling them for from three to ten times their face value. Members of fourteen of the seventeen fraternities on the campus were engaged in scalping activities, the paper said.

President Walter Dill Scott said he did not believe the charge, but added that if such ticket-selling was being perpetrated, he would see to it that action would be taken against the offenders.

Cathedral Battles Aggie High to Tie

Aggie high opened its football season by battling Cathedral high to a 6 to 6 tie on the Ag college field Friday. Coach Wilbur Knight has only been working with his gridsters for two weeks while the Cathedral team has played three games previous to the contest. The Aggie team outweighed the Cathedral gridsters but the latter's experience helped them to hold the score to a tie.

The Cathedral team scored its touchdown in the middle of the first period when Coniglio caught a pass thrown by McManaman and sprinted thirty yards thru the Aggies secondary defense for a touchodwn. Congiglio failed to kick the try-for-point.

The Aggies completed numerous first downs during the second quarter but could not cross the Cathedral goal. The ball lugging of G. Harrison and Short of the Aggies featured the play of the second quarter. The Aggies advanced to the Cathedral 8-yard line in this period but lacked the scoring punch. The Aggies tied the count in the third period when after a sixty-five yard march to the Cathedral 3-yard line, Short carried the ball over. G. Harrison missed a drop-kick for the extra point and a chance for victory.

The teams battled evenly during the last period. Cathedral resorted to its famous spread formation but the play did not work to advantage against the Aggies. The two teams were in the middle of the field when the final whistle blew.

Coniglio in the backfield and Anstead and Dahms in the line did the best work for Cathedral. G. Harrison, Short and Captain Nealy starred for Aggie high. The summary:

Frankie Larrabee Wins Decision Over Dundee

OMAHA, Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—The Griffith brothers, Buzz and spotlight on Denny Ryan's Knights of Columbus fight card here last night.

Buzz made "Speedy" sparks of Oklahoma look like a slow motion picture and easily took the decision after mauling the Oklahoman around the ring for ten rounds. Only once did Sparks have a chance. In the fifth round he dropped Griffith with a right uppercut. Buzz was up before the count started.

Toughey Griffith had a somewhat harder task, but succeeded in winning the referee's approval after six rounds of fast fighting with George Barna of Omaha.

Frankie Larabee, Lincoln, took a six-round decision from Donie Dundee of Omaha; Kid Hutch won in four from Frankie Stitt and Babe Widmaier took silent Blaha's number in the opening four-round event.

TECUMSEH ROUTS NEBRASKA CITY HI

Coach Higgins' Crew Continues in Race for Southeastern Nebraska Honors by 44 to 6 Victory.

TECUMSEH, Neb., Oct. 21.—Tecumseh high's football team continued on its battle for southeastern Nebraska championship honors today by trouncing the Nebraska City eleven here, 44 to 6.

What appeared to be a complete scoreless game for Nebraska City was turned toward a lone score, when after playing his first team men for three periods, Coach Dean Higgins turned the responsibility over to second stringers in the final period and Nebraska City staged an aerial attack which netted the only score.

The Indians had little trouble in the first period and after a series of line smashes Casford scored the first touchdown, followed a few minutes by another when Mathis raced fifty-five yards to counter. In the second quarter a pass, Casford to Mathis, netted twenty-seven yards and another touchdown. The half ended 18-0 in favor of Tecumseh.

Smash Over By Plunges.

Tecumseh staged a battle of line smashes and end runs in the third period and had an easy time for a quick touchdown as Fuller crossed the line early in the period. Nebraska City was thrown for losses and on an attempt to punt out of danger, the kick was blocked and Mathis, recovering the ball, sped forty-five yards for another score. A pass netted the point.

Tecumseh drew several penalties and backed up with twenty yards to go when Casford faked a punt and went down an open field sixty-six yards for a touchdown. An end run netted the extra point.

In the final period, an almost entirely new team was substituted for Tecumseh and Nebraska City took advantage by staging a clever aerial attack. A pass netted twenty yards and Taylor raced fifty yards for the only touchdown. The lineups and summary:

SEWARD, Neb., Oct. 22.—Coach Ben Kellner's Seward high school gridsters added another win to their string of victories Friday afternoon on the Seward field by defeating the Ulysses high school squad 13 to 0. All of Seward's points were made in the first half. A blocked punt by Paden and a forty-yard run accounted for the first touchdown and smashing line plunges with Blaker carrying the ball over the line for the second. Seward failed to kick goal on the second touchdown. A record crowd witnessed the game.

Wakefield Team Downs Hartington High Outfit

ABOUT the only golfer to reduce his medal average for the season in the recent Metropolitan P. G. A. tounrament was its winner, Gene Sarazen. Gene climbed from sixteenth to thirteenth place in the standing, by virtue of his 292.

Joe Turnesa, shooting the worst four rounds he has had in a long time, dropped from eleventh to sixteenth, a bad 311 being responsible.

The slightest of fractions divide MacDonald, Smith, Bobby Cruickshank and Leo Diegel, who occupy fourth, fifth and sixth places. These players have gone thru tournament after tournament without changing their relative positions in the averages. Tho Diegel made a gain on Smith and Cruickshank in the Metropolitan P. G. A. it was so tiny he still must trail just back of them.

By capturing the Maryland Open championship, the veteran Freddie McLeod has added his name to the list of tournament winners for the year. He did the thirty-six holes in an even 150. The averages:

Football Coaches Born, Not Made

By United Press

"Football coaches are born, not made," Henry F. Schulte, director of track athletics at the University of Nebraska, says in explaining Nebraska's recent defeat by the University of Missouri, 7 to 6, in a game in which Missouri gained but forty-six yards from scrimmage as compared with the Cornhusker's 346.

In a glowing tribute to Gwinn Henry, football coach at the University of Missouri, Schulte, a former Missouri coach, said:

"Here is a coach that never says much except to his men. But what he says is given with such force that he inspires confidence in his men. They believe in him. Henry is a determined man, confident of what he knows tho seldom outspoken to his men. He never inveigles, drives or abuses them.

"This soft-spoken Texan knows football. When one of his men makes a mistake he does not bluster and bawl him out. Calmly and carefully he explains to the player his error. Henry's forceful personality, his confidence in his men and their game and his knowledge of football wins the most stubborn player on the field."

Speaking at a student mass meeting recently at the Missouri school, Bert Clark, star halfback on the Tiger team, said: "Coach Henry would have you believe that he has nothing to do with our victories, but that isn't true. He took us, a bunch of green-horns who didn't know a football from a pineapple and in his quiet and convincing way told us and demonstrated how the game should be played. It is to this man that we owe our victories."

RENEW RELATIONS.

Lafayette and West Virginia elevens met on the gridiron this season for the first time in thirty-one years.

UNI PLACE EDGES OUT NARROW WIN

Lincoln Reserves Outplay Young Methodists, But Late Passing Attack Wins Game 7 to 6.

The University Place high school football team retained its undefeated record in the Greater Lincoln league Friday, rallying in the closing minutes to win by a 7 to 6 score from the Lincoln reserves.

In the opening minutes the young Red and Black warriors completely swept the young Methodists off their feet, scoring early in the first quarter, when Durisch smashed thru the line, after he and Weyant had alternated at carrying the ball from mid-field. Weyant failed in his try for extra point. The second quarter was a repetition of the first but the Reserves seemed to lack the necessary punch to place the ball over the final chalk mark.

The second half opened with a rally by the young Methodists, but it proved to be of no avail, altho from this point on they battled on more even terms. The ball was carried up and down the field in the final quarter, neither having enough punch to go beyond a certain designated point, until in the closing moments a pass, Parsons to Mooberry, placed the ball on the Reserves' 40-yard line.

On the next play, a long pass, Parsons to McClain, placed the ball on the Reserves' 8-yard line. The third pass was from Parsons to Duey, who fell over the goal line. Jack McClain kicked the extra point, and a few seconds later the game ended.

The playing of Elmer Durisch was the feature of the game, and he seems to be following in the footsteps of his brother, Everett, who was a great Lincoln high athlete. Weyant and Luchsinger were the other mainstays in the Reserve squad. Parsons, McClain and Yetter were the outstanding players with the Uni Place team. Lineup and summary:

Seward Academy Plays To Tie With Wilber Hi

WILBER, Neb., Oct. 22.—Coach Hellwege's Seward academy football squad and the Wilber high team battled to a 13 to 13 score on the Wilber field Friday afternoon. The Seward team registered two touchdowns and one goal in the first half while Wilber duplicated the count in the last half.

North Platte Sails Thru Scottsbluff

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., Oct. 22.—North Platte remained among the undefeated high school football teams when Coach Harry McCandless' eleven blanked the green Scottsbluff eleven, 25 to 0, here yesterday. The first quarter ended scoreless but the locals succeeded in punching two touchdowns over in the secod period. Snyder scored these markers. Bunnel was shaken into the open field and with a cutback ran twenty yards to the third counter.

Greeno, 165 pound tackle, swung out and around for forty-eight yards to count again for the McCandless machine. Sid Hoadley's Scottsbluff team fought doggedly but the absence of seasoned material was evident as the game progressed. The summary:

Hornsby's Betting Days Bring Action

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Rogers Hornsby, captain of the New York Giants and former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is scheduled to stand trial here Oct. 31 for collection of $92,000 horse race betting debt he allegedly contracted during a two-year mutual agreement with Frank L. Moore, Newport, Ky., betting commissioner.

Depositions already filed in the case quote Moore as saying Hornsby frequently placed bets as high as $1,000 daily during the pennant season of 1926 and that after their mutual luck failed, Moore was forced to borrow $130,000 to pay off his and Hornsby's debts. The ball player's position in the case is that Moore's claims are inadmissable in law as they are gambling in nature.

Elmwood Team Wins in Tilt With Bethany High

ELMWOOD, Neb., Oct. 21.—Elmwood defeated Bethany high here Friday afternoon, 6 to 0. It was a hard fought battle, as both teams appeared evenly matched. Elmwood scored its touchdown on a pass, Keckler to Hulfish in the second quarter. The last half was a nip and tuck affair, both teams struggling to gain yards. In the closing minutes a Bethany rally almost netted the Maroon and Gold warriors a score, but the final whistle halted the drive. The loss of Quarterback Heinz, who sustained a broken arm in the Seward game, was a great handicap to the Bethany eleven. Elmwood plays Adams here next Friday. The lineup and summary:

COTNER BULLDOGS BEAT WAYNE TEAM

Moon's Eleven Scores 12 to 0 Win Over Wildcats—Taylor and Kitchen Stand Out in Victory.

Coach F. B. Moon's Cotner Bulldogs drove thru the Wayne eleven for a 12 to 0 victory on the Cotner field Friday afternoon. The Wildcats were entirely in the background until the final period when they opened up a series of successful passes which kept the pigskin near the Cotner line. The Bulldogs scored on straight football, having but little luck at the aerial game.

Cotner's scores came in quick succession in the third period. "Howie" Kitchen carried the ball across for the first touchdown, after having chased down the field in a series of short runs. Mackey's blocking of Dennis' punt on Wayne's 29-yard line gave Taylor a chance to scramble thru the line six times and score the second counter.

Coach Fred Dale's charges did not threaten the Cotner goal until the last few minutes of the game when they failed in an effort to complete a pass over the line just before the final gun. The Wildcats were weakened by the absence of D. Farrow, fullback, and Jack Wray, halfback. Kinney, Wayne quarter, sustained a bad knee injury in the final period.

First Half See-Saw.

The first two quarters were see-saw affairs, with the game a punting duel between "Howie" Kitchen, diminutive Cotner quarter and former Lincoln high gridder, and Gerald Dennis, Wayne left halfback. The half ended with the score 0 to 0 and Cotner in possession of the ball on its own 48-yard line.

After back and forth struggling in the opening of the third quarter, a Wayne fumble of Kitchen's punt which was recovered by Cotner on the Wayne 5-yard line, paved the way for the first touchdown. Kitchen carried the oval across in two downs. His placekick for the extra point was blocked.

Wayne returned Kitchen's kickoff and began a drive toward the Cotner goal after the first touchdown had been scored against the Wildcat invaders by Mackey's blocking of Dennis' punt placed the ball in the possession of Cotner on the Wayne 29-yard line.

After line plunges in which Taylor, Rowland and Kitchen alternated in carrying the ball, Taylor plunged the remaining distance, fifteen yards, in four downs, for Cotner's second touchdown that ended the scoring of the game. Kitchen failed to placekick in the try for point.

Wayne tried desperately to score in the fourth period but the efforts of the Wildcats in line plunges, in end runs, and aerial attacks were of no avail. The final Wayne pass went over the goal line but was incomplete.

Taylor and Kitchen.

For Cotner, Taylor and Kitchen were the outstanding ground gainers with Captain Rowland also showing up well. The line, as a whole, functioned very well, tho letting down a bit in the last. The tackles and ends took turns in smearing the runs of the Wildcats. Seeley, at guard, in spite of an injured knee, played well while C. Miller threw the Wayne backs for several losses, and Center Richards showed to advantage. Bigge, substitute guard, received a badly battered face immediately upon getting into the game. Mackey showed up well at left tackle.

Fullback Lowrey was the mainstay for the visiting team, plunging thru for many good gains and also backing the line well. Captain Scranton at tackle held up the left side of the Wayne line. The lineup and summary:

Flivver Racers Start Drake-Grinnell Derby

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Palpitating at every valve and piston-straining at every gear and bolt, 21 ancient flivvers, entrants in the collegiate flivver race—Des Moines to Grinnell—hopped off here this morning.

Mayor Fred Hunter of Des Moines, released the "college buggies" at one minute intervals, beginning shortly after 9 a. m.

At Colfax, some twenty miles out of Des Moines, several drivers were reported stalled for repairs.

Three entrants were ruled out of the starting line at Des Moines. One was afflicted with four flat tires; another weighed in with no rubber at all and the third carried a specially built motor which the judges ruled out.

All drivers were forced to sign "safety slips," barring them from driving with one hand or crowding on the curves.

A few of the entrants expect to cover fifty some miles in time for the Drake-Grinnell football game at 2:30 p. m.

Henry Ford is said to have placed a bid for the winner.

Crawford Beats Gordon.

CRAWFORD, Neb., Oct. 21.—Crawford romped over Gordon here Friday afternoon, 26 to 0. McCoy at quarter, Minick at half, and Ring in the line, stood out in the Crawford victory. Halfback Riggs played his last game as he becomes ineligible next Wednesday when he reaches twenty-one years of age.

MARKETS AND FINANCIAL

STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Weekly mercantile reviews reported signs of betterment in some departments of trade with further evidence of increasing volume which promises eventually to gain substantial proportions. However, the main body of stocks had no time to devote in early dealings to anything outside of itself. Convulsive breaks in Friday's late trading weakened many marginal accounts to an extent which forced liquidation at the opening, creating a heavy tone in the whole market.

New lows on the movement were reached by Steel, General Motors and other leaders. Houston Oil experienced a further sharp break.

Coming Events.

Timken Roller Bearing is slow to yield ground due to the fact that insiders are buying the stock and taking it out of the market. We think Timken should be bought and held.

Southern Pacific is one of the strongest issues in the rail group.

May Department Stores is being purchased by banking interests who are close to the management and we think the stock could work up another ten points before the end of the month.

General American Tank Car is being purchased and taken out of the market. We would buy it for a move of from eight to ten points.

GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Wheat futures were unable to hold their slight strength at today's session of the Chicago Board of Trade and prices went to new low levels. Corn and oats were firmer. Wheat closed 1-2 to 5-8c lower; corn 1-2 to 3-8c higher, and oats 1-4 to 3-8c higher.

Wheat opened with a little strength and many traders were expecting a strong rally, believing the market was oversold. Liverpool cables were slightly stronger but their influence was small. The Canadian movement continued in record breaking volume and this was the chief bearish factor. There was considerable hedging at Winnipeg causing lower prices and a bearish effect on the local market. Receipts were 26 cars and the cash market was 1c lower.

Corn developed a little strength and in spite of the weakness in wheat. Expected strong rallies, however, failed to materialize ,the country was still offering corn freely and receipts here was 340 cars. Cash prices were steady; Indian summer continued in the belt.

Oats was fairly strong, considering the weakness in wheat. Receipts were forty cars and cash was fractionally off. Provisions closed lower.

OMAHA, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—Trading steadied somewhat on the Omaha grain exchange today and the recent declines were checked in corn and wheat. Other grains were still weak, however.

Corn opened ¼c higher. The market gained a little strength and the close was pronounced unchanged to ½c higher.

BONDS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(U. P.)—The feature of the bond market today was the steadiness of foreign issues, most of which held at the previous closing prices in moderate turnover. The market as a whole was irregular. Industrials were better while rails moved in a narrow range with gains and losses about evenly distributed. The only change of significance in the foreign group was made by Finland 6s which recovered part of their losses earlier in the week. The steadiness of this division was ascribed to the better status of the issues after some selling earlier this week and to the reception of new floatations which have been exceptionally heavy.

Widest moves were made in domestic issues. Pathe Exchange 7s rose ½ in good demand.

HURRYING ALONG WITH STRUCTURE

Amounts offered are small.

The department head and the fire chief, by way of comparison, visited the up-to-date bungalow F street station, home of No. 3 and later visited the O street building. Captain Al Barney at No. 3 showed his superiors and newspaper men every nook and corner of the place from basement to library with a trip over the well kept lawn surrounedd by shrubs. The dining room in the basement and the hose drying room presented spotless appearance. Three pieces of motor equipment on the main floor shone like mirrors. Every modern facility is provided even to a cloths drier to dry wet clothing of firemen just in from a fire. The process takes less than ten minutes. Another appartus removes particles of ice from each truck after a fire in winter time.

Two sleeping rooms on the top floor contain ten beds, lockers and showers. The big sitting room has a piano, purchased by the firemen, leather lounge, tables, rockers, straight chairs, radio and phonograph. Much of the equipment belongs to firemen. The big library table and phonograph were donated by Captain Barney.

Fire fighting apparatus at No. 2 station is kept in the same fine condition as that at No. 3. The dark and dingy interior is in contrast to the bright quarters of No. 3. The walls are tumbling down inside. One fireman nailed boards above his bed to keep plaster from falling upon him. The old rickety beds and mattresses are twenty-five years old. Firemen furnish their own bedding.

TAKE UP UNI DIFFERENCES

Student-Faculty Committee Meeting Scheduled at Norman, Okla.

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Student differences over rules of conduct of the University of Oklahoma were to be taken up in a joint student-faculty committee meeting today following amicable adjustments.

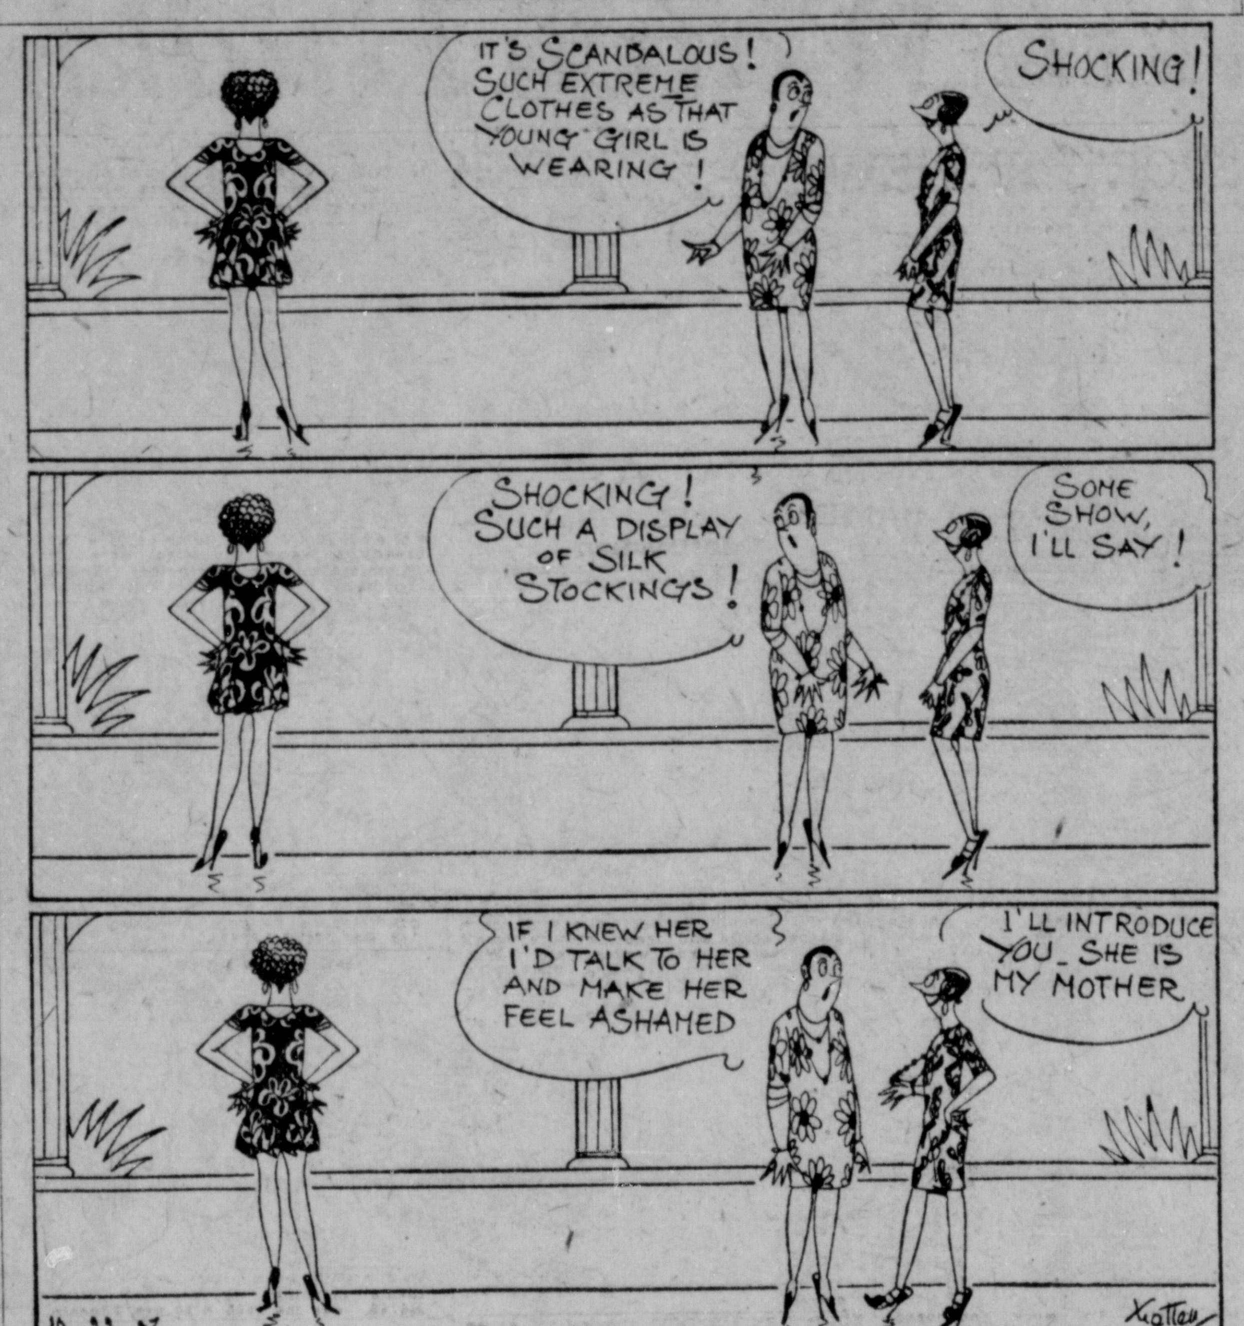

After a short-lived self-styled "revolution" on the campus yesterday, the students met in a second mass meeting last night to approve arbitration and revision of their demands for more social freedom and modification of the rule prohibiting automobile riding of students.

After a conference with President W. B. Bizzell and a rebuke for class room interruptions, the students lost the rabid spirit of revolt.

TRIBUTE IS PAID DEAD CARDINAL

Cardinal O'Donnell Among Best-Beloved Figures at Eucharistic Congress, Cardinal Mundelein Declares.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—George Cardinal Mundelin, archbishop of Chicago and host to the great eucharistic congress which was held in Chicago last summer, today issued a statement of tribute to Patrick Cardinal O'Donnell, primate of Ireland, who died today in Dublin.

"Cardinal O'Donnell was one of the best beloved figures amongst all who visited us at the eucharistic congress last year," Cardinal Mundelein stated.

CARLINGFORD, Ireland, Oct. 22.—Cardinal O'Donnell, who died here today, became the youngest bishop in the world when in 1888 he was appointed bishop of Raphoe, at which post he remained until he was appointed titular archbishop of Attalia and coadjutor to Cardinal Logue in 1922.

He was a native of Kilraine, near Glenties, County Donegal, Ireland, and was educated at the Catholic university at Maynooth. Later he became successively professor of theology and perfect of the Dunboyne establishment, at Naynooth, and rector of the Catholic university of Ireland.

Funeral arrangements had not been made today.

TRANS-ATLANTIC PLANE RETURNS

the navigator, were up early and went to the runway. The plane's motors were turned on. Stultz smiled and told friends:

"Everything is set."

Mrs. Grayson slept late and did not appear in the lobby of the hotel until a few minutes before 6 a. m. She climbed into the cabin and was followed by her two companions.

There were only a few people on the beach when the plane started. When the "Dawn" roared down the beach the first time, wobbled noticeably, and then failed to take the air, there were many audible gasps from the few people.

The "Dawn" was rolled back into starting position and once again headed down the runway. This time it took to the air, altho it gained no great height, and then turned east over the sea.

It was gone about seventeen minutes, when it appeared coming towards Old Orchard and settled in the water off the beach.

The crowd which was on the beach, numbering about 200 people, rushed to the plane and pressed around it.

Mrs. Grayson climbed from the cabin.

"We got as far as Cape Elizabeth light," she said, "But the load was too heavy and the plane was in danger of becoming unmanageable, so we had to turn back.

Had to Dump Gasoline.

"We had to dump about 200 gallons of gasoline, in order to stay up."

Two dump valves on the gas tanks were open when the plane came onto the beach.

The trouble was the same as that which caused the "Dawn" to return to Old Orchard on its previous attempt.

Even the second false start failed to discourage Mrs. Grayson.

Scarcely had she alighted from the "Dawn", than she announced a third attempt would be made about 3 p. m. today.

"We will try to reduce the load about 200 pounds," she said, "and if the weather continues good should be able to get away this afternoon.

"There is no serious trouble with the weight of the plane and if the load is cut to that extent we should be able to fly all right."

Igor Sikorsky, designer of the "Dawn", was at the beach.

He expressed satisfaction with the plane's performance under an over-heavy load, and said2 he believed a minor readjustment of the load would put the "Dawn" in shape for the 3,500-mile flight.

Weather conditions this morning were the most favorable since Mrs. Grayson came here, Oct. 10.

signed by William Evans, recognized authority in the United States. It was also contended that when a party has attempted to get a witness and failed for some reason it has a right to show why and that the defense should have been permitted to put in the stipulation for the taking of a deposition from Expert Evans and the refusal of Evans to be sworn.

On the matter of premeditation and deliberation Attorney Beghtol contended that this was not shown by the state. The first blow of the hammer in a quarrel might have killed Mrs. Sharp and the other blows could not then have been premeditated murder. Merely because Sharp's story was believed by the jury to be untrue did not show that he had planned a murder. In the Simmons case it was shown that Simmons had made arrangements to take the man he murdered on a trip. He had borrowed a hammer with which to kill the man. In Sharp's case he did not plan the trip—his wife made arrangements to drive to the home of S. A. Wilson. He did not get the hammer for this purpose. It was in the car. Premeditation might come in the twinkling of an eye but there must be some evidence to show that there was premiditation.

County Attorney Towle said he did not care to argue the question but would submit the cases to Judge Shepherd on the question of premeditation and on the selection of jurors and the other matter referred to. The county attorney said that he had started to question about whether a juror would decline to vote the death penalty and Attorney Beghtol had objected and said that this was not a voting contest. He then changed the question and asked as to conscientous objections saying that he would ask the questions as the defense wanted them asked.

Judge Shepherd said if an error in this respect had occurred and if it is error, he wanted to go into these cases before ruling. He said the case was one of importance. The state and the defense had used great care in trying the case and the court also wanted to examine the cases referred to. He said he was inclined to dispose of the motion at once but felt that he should read the cases cited first.

LINCOLN—THE FASTEST GROWING CITY IN THE ENTIRE MIDDLE WEST

DEPARTMENT NOTE IS CONCILIATORY

REPLY TO FRENCH TARIFF STATEMENT IS PREPARED.

Pledges United States to Re-examine for Possible Revision Certain Tariffs and Embargoes Protested.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—(United Press)—A conciliatory reply to the French note in the tariff discrimination dispute was completed by the state department today. Delivery of the note in Paris will probably be made late today or Monday.

The note pledges the United States government to re-examine for possible revision certain American tariff rates and sanitary embargoes protested by France as prohibitory.

But it points out that this government can not, under the law, guarantee in advance, as desired by France, reduction of the protested rates and lifting of the embargoes.

In the interest of a temporary agreement, the United States has receded from its original demand for immediate cessatton of all French tariff discrimination against American goods, and now demands elimination of new discriminations applied under the Sept. 6 law, leaving to negotiations for a permanent commercial treaty the prior discriminations.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(U.P.)—Ambassador Myron T. Herrick has notified the state department he will come here "in the near future" preparatory to returning to his post in Paris.

MEMBERS REPAINT CHURCH

Also Make Repairs and Enjoy Dinner Served by Women.

NELSON, Neb., Oct. 22.—For some time there has been a need of repairs and some painting on the Methodist church building and the parsonage. One man decided that it was time to act, and after a little campaigning, said to his fellows, "Let's go!" The women arranged for a big dinner. A large force of men with tools and paint assembled at the church early in the morning, and when the whistle blew that evening many minor repairs on the buildings had been made and a new coat of paint added.

MEN AND THINGS

The psychiatrists and other observers of mental phenomena have their own opinions about it, but we suspect that nobody ever will know if the insane are happy or unhappy. The difficulty in reaching the exact truth lies in the necessity of becoming insane to find it out, and if one recovers his mind after an attack nothing remains in his memory to give testimony on the point. We lately scanned a panphlet in which this subject was considered, the author trying to prove that as the mind is the thing that gives us most trouble, we lose all our troubles when we lose our mind. He cited the moron as the happiest of all of us as proof of his theory that the way to be happy is to be insane. He overlooked one point, and that is that the people who champion the most fantastic notions in politics get more kick out of politics.

The supreme court has affirmed the decree of the lower court that found fraud and conspiracy to have existed between Fall and Sinclair and which resulted in the former, as secretary of the interior, handing over to the latter presumptively valuable oil lands for exploitation. The opinion was the unanimous expression of the seven judges who participated. If this decree is correct, as we assume it is, then these two men have violated the law and ought to be personally punished. The court held that Fall and Doheny had done equally vicious things in connection with other leases that it set aside, following which a jury acquitted them of criminal conduct. Will the same farcical result follow the criminal prosecution of Fall and Sinclair? There are refinements of the law, such as "convinced beyond reasonable doubt" and the like that are involved,, but the average man cannot see why, if a civil court finds a transaction to be fraudulent, a criminal court doesn't find the men engaged in it guilty of fraud.

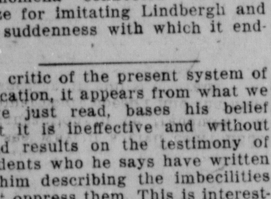

We have decided to oppose any further increase of the navy for the present at least. For a time it seemed as tho this would be necessary in order that the government should do its full duty by the foolhardy aviators who were so suddenly seized with an uncontrollable mania to fly somewhere else only stipulating that it should be over some great body of water. The navy didn't have anything to do apparently but to scour the seas in the rather hopeless task of picking up survivors, and then just as we had become reconciled to the idea of the public furnishing the money for a navy for that purpose, the aviators all became rational again. Until they have another fit we do not see why we need any more boats. We cannot drop the subject, however, without noting the mental phenomena connected with the craze for imitating Lindbergh and the suddenness with which it ended.

A critic of the present system of education, it appears from what we have just read, bases his belief that it is ineffective and without good results on the testimony of students who he says have written to him describing the imbecilities that oppress them. This is interesting evidence, but hardly convincing or conclusive. Perhaps they merely present to him what they know he regards as imbecilities, and thus they gain his applause and his support at one time. If you are inclined to believe that the professors are jackasses, just con over those you know and see if this fits any of them. If you don't happen to know any of them consider the fact that none of them are employed except thru the recommendation of successful teachers or who are tested by capable executives.

Without any doubt one of the great advantages of college life consists in the contacts with one's fellows, because out of this interchange of opinion and rubbing of mental elbows one gets an idea of how civilization is made up, but to argue that this is the chief aim and benefit is ridiculous, yet this critic argues that way. One of the disadvantages of these contacts lies in the fact that too often some brilliant erratic who is constitutionally a rebel, and who hunts up heresies spreads them more for the delight of passing them along and raising the devil generally. These ideas are seldom new ones, since new ideas are scarce and they are born of experience and effort oftener than they spring from inspiration. Most of them are abandoned after college life because they don't fit in, and those who don't let them loose form our literati, or intelligentzia.

BRAIN TESTS
By Sam Lloyd

12 Minutes to Answer This.

It was the village cut-up's loud guffaw, revealing his hiding place, that brought the startled keeper of the town clock out of his trance as he stood and gazed at that odd assortment of hands on the big dial. The town joker, who is also the village clock maker's apprentice, claimed that he had added the extra hands to test the old man's familiarity with clocks, as well as to give him a mild shock. "You see," said the young fellow, "I want to know if you can identify the original hands and tell the correct time that that clock is showing, by wiping out in your imagination the superfluous pointers. Of course, the long ones are the minute hands, and the shorter ones the hour hands."

Can you tell the time that that clock is showing by discovering the hands which the apprentice added?

Telling the World.
By Neal O'Hara.

The hay fever season has been officially launched with a bunch of golden rod splashed across the prow of your face. In the spring you get spring fever. You don't want to do anything. In the fall you get hay fever. You can't do anything if you try. That only gives you six months for work.

The klaxon chorus of hay fever addicts is now out-honking the army of tin flivver tourists. Battling swarms of asthma microbes in blow-by-blow fight that lasts three months. And there is weeping and washing of handkerchiefs.

Anybody with two nostrils and one dozen handkerchiefs is eligible for hay fever. It is one epidemic that has malice for all and charity for none. It assails the pug nose and the patrician beezer without fear or favoritism. It is the one brand of outdoor amusement that is strictly on the level.

* * *

Any one can catch hay fever on the first bounce. You can get it from eating shredded hay. You can get it from voting too many straw ballots. You can get it from flirting with grass widows. After you've worn a straw hat till it has old age, it may turn on you and slip you the virus of hay fever.

This fashionable autumn plague comes from hay, grain, feed and other staple items in the general store. It comes from the beauty dust that flowers prink themselves up with. Every atom in Mother Nature's powder puff is loaded with hay fever symptoms for innocent bystanders. Direct from producer to consumer. No middle man.

A bale of hay that costs $16 is worth a million to throat and nose specialists. Every batch of new mown hay brings a new moan from fever addicts. And there is no prescription for this quaint mal de nez except a round-trip ticket to New Hampshire. Out of forty-eight states and insular possessions, New Hampshire is the only solution for making this malady disappear.

What Wall street is to widows' savings, what Thurston is to rabbits and ducks, that's what New Hampshire is to hay fever. One whiff of her magic ozone and presto! You play drop-the-handkerchief.

* * *

Read over these sumptuous offers for effective cures.

Don't be a member of the Ker-choo Ker-choo Klan. That vicious order that wears white handkerchiefs around the nose for a mask. We can cure you in two weeks flat by our tar and feather method. You sleep on a tar roof in a feather bed. Don't delay. Write now to the Bethlehem Sneeze company, Bethlehem, N. H., for reservations.

* * *

Are you interested in 100 percent profit on sure investment? Get in touch with us at once. We are canning tears of freshly arrived hay fever victims and placing them on the market. Hollywood spends $5,000,000 a year on glycerine sobs. We are stepping in and taking away that business with genuine human tears. Compactly canned and handsomely labeled. Also just the thing for salt water bathing. Only a few million shares of common stock left. Write today. Universal Tear and Sigh company, White Mountains, N. H.

Hay feverish citizens, attention! Did you know high altitudes furnish the only relief for hay fever? By our special method, cure yourself at home. Send for our special correspondence course in high altitude professions and let the postman carry relief right to your door. Fill in the coupon without delay and mark with an X what profession you wish to follow: Parachute jumper. Flagpole sitter. Lightning rod mechanic. Window washer. Airplane letter carrier. Steeplejack. Weather observer. We also have a few good openings for bridge jumpers with hay fever. The Hay Fever Correspondence School, Manchester, N. H.
